SEWER PLANT PROPOSITION UP TO PEOPLE

Council Believes Activated Sludge System Is Best

WILL ABIDE BY VOTE

Meeting With Special Committee to Discuss Plans

Thursday afternoon the committee on sewers appointed by the council to discuss the installation of a sewer system met in the city hall to investigate the proposed plans and prepare answers to the two questions propounded to them by Councilman Dwight Stephenson at a recent joint meeting of the council and the committee.

Mr. Stephenson's first question: "Is it in the opinion of the committee a proper time to start proceedings to install a general sewage system for the city?" was answered in the affirmative by all of the committee with the exception of George Woodberry, who qualified his answer by saying that, in his opinion, it was time to start proceedings for a sewer system in the business district only.

Discussion of the second question: "If a piece of ground could be found that would satisfactorily take care of from 80 to 90 per cent of the sewage of Glendale, same to be approved by the state board of health, would the committee recommend that this property be acquired by condemnation proceedings or otherwise and the people be asked to vote a bond issue to take care of such a system?" materially changed Mr. Woodberry's viewpoint regarding the installation of a sewer system for the business district only and the committee unanimously voted in the affirmative on the second question.

As it is not the intention of the city council to burden the public with a sewer system that they do not want and that would be objectionable to the people, the matter will be put to a vote of the people. Before it is up for vote, discussions of all angles of the system will be held. A tentative plan for the installation of the system has already been discussed and the property to be used, tentatively, as a site for the disposal plant has been selected. This site is 270 acres of land in the northwest section of the city, owned by Hahn and Palanconi. The land is not being used. It is that tract of land bounded on the south by the flood control channel, on the west by the San Fernando road, on the north by Glenwood road and on the east by the line of tract 646.

According to tentative plan for the system, already discussed, the disposal plant will be located at about the center of the tract and will be about half a mile from any dwelling. The activated sludge system of disposal will be used. This is practically odorless and as the tanks will be underground, a casual glance would not indicate the presence of such plant. A sub-irrigation system to be installed in connection with the sewage disposal plant has been discussed.

It is not the intention of the council, in the event the people vote in favor of the bonds and adopt the tentative plans now under discussion, to make the site of the disposal plant a sewer farm in the general acceptance of the term. The property will be beautified and turned into a park as soon as the city has sufficient funds to carry on the work. Until such funds are available it has been suggested that the property not actually used for the disposal plant be rented out as small farms.

The activated sludge system, as planned for installation here, in

REX HASZALL IS IN VERY BAD FIX

Ex-Minister Tells of Checkered Career Over the World

SAN JOSE, Cal., Jan. 13.—The Rev. Rex Haszall, philosophized in the county jail here today while authorities investigated a long list of robberies for which he was alleged to have been responsible.

He told officers a remarkable story of a career which, he said, had taken him from the Baptist ministry in Oregon; through a prison term in Utah; had included studies in philosophy; a term of service as a cameraman in a Los Angeles studio; a tour of Europe, and a half-dozen other things.

He was arrested on suspicion of having been the man who burglarized several homes in Santa Clara. Officers here believe he may have had some connection with the recent robbery of a California street cable car of $3500.

"Never stop smiling and courting was the advice they jointly gave.

CALIFORNIA GIRL IN PARIS TRAGEDY WITH HUSBAND

Formerly Audrey Creighton, Famous Artist With Violin

PARIS, Jan. 13.—Thomas S. Ryan, a newspaper man, has been arrested here charged with attempting to murder his wife, formerly Miss Audrey Creighton of California, by forcing her to swallow bichloride of mercury tablets on a threat he otherwise would kill himself.

According to Mrs. Creighton, mother of Audrey, the Ryans were married in California in 1917, where her daughter was celebrated as a violinist, a Fontainleau conservatory prize winner. Because of Ryan's threats of murder and suicide at that time, Mrs. Creighton declares, the marriage never was consumated.

Mrs. Creighton attempted to have it nullified, but the courts refused, as Audrey was of age. She and her daughter went to Paris after the war, while Ryan had last been heard of in India. He returned last Monday and visited his wife here. On Wednesday he promised to secure her a divorce. On Thursday morning, Ryan aroused the household by crying to the servants "Madame has swallowed poison."

He called a taxi, rushed his wife to the hospital, returned to the hotel and disappeared. Audrey's mother immediately informed the police and investigation of the circumstances leading to the poisoning led to Ryan's arrest.

TROOP NO. 2 WILL DEDICATE HOME

Big Ceremony to Be Given Saturday Evening Here

Troop No. 2, Boy Scouts of America, which some time ago realized its ambition to have a club house "far from the madding crowd," is going to dedicate its sylvan retreat Saturday night and is inviting the public to enjoy the ceremonies, which will be of no small interest.

Through the kindness of Charles L. Chandler, president of the Glendale council, which includes Burbank and Eagle Rock, the troop was given the use of a site in one of the most beautiful portions of Verdugo Woodlands and near enough to Mr. Chandler's home for him to keep a watchful eye upon the club house and protect it from trespass or vandalism.

The troop will meet at the corner of Wilson and Brand at 7 o'clock and march to the Glendale Montrose station where, through the courtesy of Mr. Hatch of the G. M. Railway, a special car will take them to Verdugo Woodlands.

The program, which will begin at 7:30 will include an address of welcome by Benjamin Robison, Sr., and a speech by Charles L. Chandler, president of the council, as well as a report of the activities of the troop during the past year by H. Benjamin Robison, and a playlet by each of the four scout patrols.

Glendale now has a Boy Scout council of the first class for which H. F. Benner has been engaged to act as executive.

Glendale is the Guardian Of Great Horn of Plenty

By JOHN H. GERRIE
Prosperity Editor Glendale Daily Press

The San Fernando Valley is shaped like a horn of plenty. And it IS a HORN OF PLENTY. And Glendale is the guardian of this Horn of Plenty.

This wonder valley furnishes a greater variety of foodstuffs than any other section of equal size in the United States, if not in the world. The value of its food products in 1921 reached the tremendous total of approximately FIFTEEN MILLION DOLLARS!

John H. Gerrie

And Glendale is the GATE WAY to and from it!

The production of beans alone is estimated in excess of $3,000,000, oranges ran above $2,500,000 and the contribution in poultry and eggs was more than $1,500,000. Lemons crossed the million mark, alfalfa approached that mark, olives reached nearly half a million in value and lettuce approximated a quarter of a million.

More than thirty different articles of food, comprising fruits, vegetables, grains, nuts and dairy products, were produced in almost staggering quantities during the year. And a large percenatge of this production found its way OVER THE BOULEVARDS OF GLENDALE into Los Angeles.

For Glendale is the GATE WAY of the San Fernando valley.

In the month of December last there were shipped over the Southern Pacific tracks from the city of San Fernando 52 cars of lettuce, six cars of oranges and 48 cars of lemons, besides many other cars of other products. In the first ten days of January the shipments from the same station included 14 cars of lemons, 10 of oranges and two of beans. This in an off season and with several other important shipping points in the valley. Practically all these shipments came over the rails THROUGH GLENDALE.

The HORN of PLENTY empties out via the GLENDALE ROUTE.

The valley contains, among other vast productive enterprises, the largest olive grove in the world under one ownership and single management. This comprises 1600 acres of bearing olive trees, the amount of its product exceeds 1000 tons and its gross value in food and oil will exceed $400,000. At the height of the season this great grove gives employment to 500 persons.

A single dairy in the valley possesses a herd of 300 Guernsey cows, said to be the largest herd of Guernseys in the United States. The milk from this herd has been rated at 99 per cent, the highest rating, by the Los Angeles health department. There are eleven other large dairies in the Van Nuys district alone.

Other high lights of this wonderful valley: One rancher realized $7000 off a 20-acre strawberry patch in a single season. One small orange grove netted $8500 from 4½ acres and another returned $4000 per acre. A single packing house shipped a car of lettuce every day for three months. In a season 25,000 cars of potatoes went over the rails to eastern points.

Food for the world, coming through almost every day, via the GLENDALE GATE!

The valley is nearly 25 miles in length, from 8 to 15 miles in width and comprises some 130,000 acres. It possesses one of the most complete irrigation systems in the world, being honeycombed with an underground cement and steel pipe system, all water delivered through meters at one cent per inch per hour. Warm air in winter off the Mohave desert prevents danger from frost. Various elevations widen the variety of products.

The prosperity of the valley naturally is attracting high class settlers in increasing number, not only on the land but in the towns. In the city of San Fernando, with more than 4000 population, 800 frontage feet of store building was put up in ten months and all space was taken before the buildings were completed. No houses are to be had and the excellent hotels are filled. In Van Nuys, with 5000 population, building permits in 1921 of $700,000 exceeded all local records. There are no vacancies in the town. New dwelling houses in San Fernando last year totaled 204 and new business houses 36. Similar showings are made in other valley towns, notably in Lankershim and Burbank.

This data, obtained by personal calls at chambers of commerce throughout the valley in advance of official publication, is particularly interesting at this time to Glendale. For the position of Glendale as custodian of this "horn of plenty" assures it of prosperity as long as the valley is prosperous, and that OUGHT TO BE FOREVER.

Glendale is the channel by which the products of the San Fernando valley go to market and the channel by which prosperity enters the valley. The shortest route from valley points into Los Angeles is via the San Fernando road and Glendale avenue. Valley producers are now looking for shorter connection over the Glendale boulevard into Los Angeles. Some of them plan to take the subject up with the authorities of this city.

Is Glendale sharing in the wealth of the valley to the extent she might? Is she catering to the needs of valley producers as she ought? Is she making herself known to those who live and thrive in the valley as the guardian of the Horn of Plenty?

Or, is she letting a golden prize SLIDE THROUGH HER FINGERS?

RAISING FIGS IN TEXAS NOW

ROBSTOWN, Tex., Jan. 13.—Fig and orange farming may become one of the biggest industries in this section of the west gulf coast countries, according to plans of leading farmers of this section.

The orange and other citrus fruit growing industry in this district is in an experimental stage, but a number of small orchards have produced abundant yields of excellent quality.

Local interests are planning to plant 5,000 fig trees in this immediate vicinity as soon as proper irrigation can be arranged. Individual farmers are also making plans for extensive additions to their citrus orchards, beginning

SAYS FORD WOULD GET 200 MILLIONS

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 13.—Charges that if the government accepts Henry Ford's proposition to take over the Muscle Shoals nitrate plant it will amount to a gift of $200,000,000 to Ford were made today in a statement by C. C. Tinkler, president of the Construction Company of North America. Tinkler is competing with Ford for control of the project.

Hoberg is now 94 years old. Tozier himself is a member of a well-known pioneer family.

FORD WOULD SCRAP FRENCH NAVY IF THEY SELL IT

Officials Said to Have Offered Him Old Cruisers

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—Henry Ford here today, announced he is ready to buy and scrap the entire French navy.

Ford received a cablegram some days ago from Paris, asking if Ford would buy for scrapping purposes a number of presumably obsolete French cruisers and battleships.

"I cabled back immediately," said Ford, "stating that the only proposition of that kind I cared to consider from France would be one of the purchase and junking of the entire French navy. I am not interested in parts of navies. I want to scrap them all.

"France would make money and be in a better position in the world if she sold me her entire fleet and let me junk it tomorrow. I never received any reply to my proposition from the French. But, France and every other nation could well afford to scrap their big battleships and cruisers. When they proved that an airplane could sink a battleship they made the big fighting ships of all the navies of the world out of date.

"There is one thing, however, that I would like to have well understood. I do not believe in universal disarmament until proper provision is made to give employment to the men and women now working in the shipyards, the munitions factories and the arsenals. The business of taking care of the employes of the navy yards who will be thrown out of work because of the naval reductions plan of the arms conference should be one of the first things taken up. I have not heard it mentioned yet."

Ford would talk only briefly on the senate action yesterday in seating Truman H. Newberry, his opponent in the 1918 Michigan election, but he warned that all those voting for Newberry would have to answer to the people.

Turning to his dream of developing vast quantities of waterpower for industrial purposes in the south and middle west, he said:

"The Mississippi river is today the greatest object of wanton waste in the world. It could be made the world's most valuable possession. Twenty power dams could be constructed on the Mississippi river. Such a power development would make cities like St. Louis, St. Paul and Minneapolis, New Orleans, Memphis, Davenport among the most flourishing in the world.

"Raising the level of the river would insure a deep water channel for steamships the entire navigable length of the stream. It would permit Davenport to ship manufactured products to Europe.

"The government could issue currency against the project, the rentals would retire the currency in twenty years and the project would be paid for without one cent of cost to the people."

Shortly after 8 o'clock this morning an automobile belonging to H. A. R. The collision occurred at the corner of California and Central. The left rear wheel of the truck was broken, while the radiator, front fenders and lamps of the other car were badly damaged.

Charleton was driving south on Central when the front of his car struck the rear of the truck, turning it completely around. The rear wheel of the truck struck the curbing and was completely wrecked, and caused it to turn over. Before it could be stopped the car driven by Charleton ran over the curbing and onto a nearby lawn.

ANNEXATION LOS ANGELES NOW TALKED

Group Working Here Is Report Current in City

MUCH OBJECTION

Anti-Annexation Group Organizing to Fight Plan

The man with his ear to the ground today is hearing earth-mutters that indicate a group of citizens are proposing annexation to Los Angeles and, without letting the sun go down on such a proposition, anti-annexationists are now organizing and will conduct a campaign of publicity that will end annexation talk for at least a period of time that will endure with the present and guiding generation.

It is known, or it is a moral certainty, that there is a group of people in Los Angeles working in an effort to annex various sections to Los Angeles. This statement, it is said, may not be giving actual facts, but those who believe it is so say there is every indication that there is such a body of people working in Glendale at this time.

There is no demand for annexation to Los Angeles, according to leading Glendale citizens. The concensus of opinion is that Glendale and Los Angeles are able to be of more service to each other under existing circumstances than they would be if Glendale becomes a part of Los Angeles.

The people of Glendale are proud of the achievements of the city, and while hundreds of Glendale's citizens are in business in Los Angeles, few of them are in favor of annexation. It is the general opinion in this city that Glendale has much to lose and little to gain in the event of annexation.

One of the most active antagonists of the annexation proposition said today:

"We had better hold off a few years and, if things continue, we may want to annex Los Angeles to Glendale. We are the fastest growing city in the United States and the time may come when we will want to annex suburban territory."

PARIS, Jan. 13.—Raymond Poincare, former president of France, today formally accepted President Millerand's invitation to form a new cabinet to succeed that of Aristide Briand. Poincare's formal acceptance is taken as an indication he has been successful in his efforts to complete a ministry.

Official announcement today of Poincare's acceptance was taken in political circles to mean he would undoubtedly head the next French government. It took him less than 24 hours of private inquiry among potential ministers to secure the necessary members of a cabinet which he will head as premier and probably as minister of foreign affairs.

Delayed Message Tells of Country of Frozen Death

SCITCHRANI, in the Autonomous Soviet Republic of Tchuvash, Dec. 25.—(Delayed).—This is the country of "frozen death."

Death in the snow on long roads that lead, not to food, but oblivion, death alone and far from loved ones, and hunger or cold, or with loved ones watching them in dirty, foul smelling huts, where the last piece of furniture has been sold for "bread," death on railroads, in dirty box cars on the way to Siberia—such is the death that is coming daily, hourly, to those who are left in this tiny republic, near the head waters of the Volga.

A country which, in its physical appearance, is much like the far-west of the United States. Ony one of the towns, if we take away the human part—the bushy faces of the peasants, the fur caps, felt boots (of the fortunate few), the ragged coats of others, is the counter type of anymost any little trading town on the plateau of the great American northwest.

Mutchalova might have been Tehacapi on the California divide in winter. Arzamans might have been almost any little watering station on the Union Pacific, on the plateau between the Rockies and the Sierras.

But village after village in this region has already lost two-thirds, sometimes three-fourths its population, according to the unvarying accounts of scores of refugees with whom I talked today.

The last of this year's meager harvest has now been consumed and no food is being shipped into this district. As yet there are no kitchens even for the children although this relief has been promised by the government. There are rumors that the A. R. A. will come soon, with American food for the children, however.

"We are ready to die," one refugee said, "if they will only save the children."

Meanwhile the flight or the attempted flight of the peasants continues. The majority of those who are able to obtain means for travel start for Siberia. Many of them die along the road. A few go to Moscow hoping to find work. The hunger fugitives are of all ages. A woman who looked seventy, carrying a baby of perhaps 18 months, climbed clumsily into one of the box cars of our train. The red guard ejected them. They had no ticket.

Every station platform on the railroad line, running from the western edge of the famine zone to Kazan, was crowded with refugees. Scores tried to get on. Only a few succeeded before the train was pronounced full.

Many said they had been waiting for six hours in the snow. Outside one station against the walls there was a row of white mounds. One mound moved. It was a woman.

Jensen's Palace Grand Shops Being Erected

Henry C. Jensen is excavating for a new building next to his Palace Grand theater building which, when completed, will be known as Jensen's Palace Grand Shops. It will be somewhat different from the ordinary store building and will be beautiful in its appearance and exclusive in its arrangements. Jensen's Palace Grand theater and Jensen's Palace Grand shops, when completed will form a setting of buildings in a class by themselves and something of which the people of Glendale may be proud. The two upper stories will consist of specialty shops which will deal mostly in ladies' apparel. The ceiling height of the first floor will be 16 feet and the second floor 14 feet. The interior walls will be trevatine blocks with suitable cornices and balconies.

The building is 53x150 feet; its center hall will be 12 feet in the clear and widens to 22 feet, fifty feet from main entrance. On each side a grand staircase will lead to the second floor with a skylight across the 53 feet, and also a skylight joining this one 120 feet in length. The light well from second to first floor will be 40 feet in length with beautiful rails and balustrades.

Each specialty shop has a main slide-up door 8 feet wide and two smaller doors four feet wide so that the entire shop can be opened if desired. Movable partitions will be provided to divide the shops, which can be removed if desired.

Windows and doors leading to the alley reach to the ceiling and take in the entire width of the main hall. Each shop will be provided with ventilation, leading to the roof with exhaust fans and Globe ventilators. Gas heat properly vented will be provided and ample electric lights and plugs. The removable partitions are frescoed as well as the ceilings.

The basement is one of the main features of this enterprise. Three feet from the main facade a marble stair will lead to a beautiful mezzanine balcony which runs 35 feet across the front with comfort station and rest room for ladies. The mezzanine will overlook the tournament bowling alleys and billiard halls with beautiful nooks. A five foot stair will lead from the mezzanine to the main basement. On the north side will be seven English tables in nooks. An aisle will lead directly to the rear gymnasium which will be 16x53 feet with shower bath and lockers. A stair in the rear leads to the main comfort and rest rooms for men on the south side and women on the north side and from there the stair will lead to the main hall of the first story. The basement proper will be in Egyptian architecture.

Exhaust fans and a complete ventilating and circulating system will be installed in the basement which is 14 feet high and at mezzanine, 16 feet. The bowling alleys will be standard size with bleachers and confectionery and smoking room below mezzanine, 32x16 and one section 16x16 feet.

The outside of the building will be in French renaissance and will be 42 feet high, exclusive of the basement.

All of the outside will be of terra cotta in various colors using tan as body color. The building will be lighted from second story cornice with flood lights which will illuminate the building at night. This building was designed by E. G. B. Meinardus of Los Angeles.

In the matter of the billiard parlor, the city council is on record as opposed definitely to granting permit for a billiard parlor and will not grant permit unless so instructed by a vote of the people.

CIVIC BODY WILL DISCUSS PROBLEMS

The civic committee of the chamber of commerce met last night to discuss the four main problems facing the committee: the proposed zoning ordinance, the railroad situation, the sewerage proposition and the city park.

The committee will hold another meeting next Tuesday night at 7 o'clock at the chamber to further discuss these questions. The principal discussion will develop around the railroad situation, the recent raise in fares and more satisfactory service on the Pacific Electric. This was indicated by the announcement that the railroad committee of the chamber has been invited to meet with the civic commitee at 8 o'clock on the same night, when they will discuss this question and attempt to reach a solution of the matter.

COUNCIL TURNED DOWN ALL BIDS

At the meeting of the city council Thursday night, that body rejected all bids for the improvement of Lexington drive, Howard street, Geneva street, Everett, Doran and Elk streets. The reason was that they were unsatisfactory. New bids will be called for immediately.

Street car workers in Somerset, Ky., have been granted a 25 per cent wage increase and an eight-hour day.

REHEARSALS FOR STUNT SHOW START

Rehearsals have begun for a stunt show which will be put on by members of the Athletic association of the Intermediate school the afternoon and evening of January 20. The program has not been outlined in its entirety, but it will be typical of the variety show, with music, monologues, playlets, etc.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed with Sulphur It Brings Back Its Beautiful Lustre at Once.

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully, besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small stand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

JOHNNY MEYERS GOT A DECISION

Glendale Fireman Gets Best of Four Round Argument

Johnny Meyers of the Glendale fire department made a trip to the Arcadia balloon school Thursday night and had a four-round argument with K. O. Johnson of the Pasadena fire department. According to Glendalians who saw the fight, Meyers got the decision and it was not a tournament of roses decision, either. Meyers started in the first round and outfought, outboxed and outthought Johnson at every stage of the game and hit him with everything but the waterbucket and the chair. Meyers did not knock his man out but in the last round could have landed the "sleep wallop" at any stage of the game.

ROTARY CLUB HAS 100 PER CENT MEET

Live Organization of Service to Mankind Has Fine Session

The Glendale Rotary club met Thursday for its weekly luncheon at the chamber of commerce, assembling promptly at 12 o'clock. One hundred per cent of the membership was present and four visitors.

The chief talk of the session was made by Colonel Havens who gave an illustrated account of the evolution of the fountain pen, declaring that the pen is mightier than the sword. He stated that he would give the same talk before students of Glendale High.

President Cooper announced that members would be called upon for brief talks in which they would describe the character of the business they are conducting.

Roy L. Kent was requested to give a talk on boys' work since he is chairman of the Boys' Work committee and also secretary of the Glendale Boy Scout council. He responded with a short but excellent address.

J. E. Phillips on behalf of himself and Mrs. Phillips, presented to each member a gold plated pocket pen knife which was received with expressions of great appreciation. As the cost of the knife approximated $1.25, one of the members suggested that each member give that amount in support of the work of the boy scout council. After discussion it was decided to ask members to contribute $1.25 each to the treasury of the club which would make a donation of like amount to the Boy Scout work. In conformity with its rule, the club session closed at 1:30 p. m.

Howes Better—J. E. Howes, real estate broker with offices at 200 West Broadway, has returned to his office after two weeks at his home on account of illness.

DAHLIA HEIGHTS IS SELLING FAST

Beautiful Tract in Eagle Rock Meets Ready Sale

The Dahlia Heights tract at Eagle Rock, of which the H. E. Barnum Co. is selling agents, is proving one of the best subdivisions from the standpoint of sales made, of any tract placed upon the market in that section. The tract was opened only a short time ago and notwithstanding the rainy weather, 51 lots have been sold to date, and hardly a day passes that half a dozen lots are not transferred to new owners, many of whom will build homes.

The opening of this big tract is the work of H. E. Barnum, a real estate broker of ripe experience and superior judgment. Mr. Barnum fully realized the possibilities of this section and induced capitalists to buy the Dahlia Heights tract and place it upon the market. Barnum has proved himself a real benefactor to Eagle Rock, and is justly enjoying the distinction of being one of the first to realize that Eagle Rock to destined to grow rapidly, and to help bring about that growth. The office is located at the corner of Townsend and East Colorado boulevard, Eagle Rock, and will be open Sunday.

PORTAGE, Wis., Jan. 13.—The charred body of an unidentified man with a bullet wound over the right eye was discovered today in a burning haystack in a lonely marsh three miles south of here. The body was wrapped in a gunny sack and a sheepskin coat. The man had been dead only a few hours.

Report for Duty—Lieut. (j. g.) Fred Oliver Goldsmith, U. S. N. son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Goldsmith, 1419-A South Glendale avenue, has received orders to report to the commander of the destroyer squadron, Pacific fleet, for assignment to duty. Mr. Goldsmith left today for San Diego.

FLOAT FUND HAS MANY ADHERENTS

No Word From Award Committee of Tournament of Roses

Evidence of Glendalian's faith in the float that this city entered in the recent tournament of roses in Pasadena are still coming in the way of donations to help pay for the construction work. Even if the judges of the float did not think Glendale's entry was worthy of first prize, Glendalians think so and are proving it by sending in donations to the chamber of commerce, rather, to revamp the advertising slogan of the florists, they are "saying it with money."

Today the Glendale Music club sent $5 to the chamber to be applied on the fund. Regarding the letter from the chamber of commerce to the judges of the floats in which the chamber in behalf of the people declined the award of second prize, no answer has been received from the judges. It is said that the judges are planning a meeting to be held in Pasadena at an early date and that some adjustment of prize awards satisfactory to Glendale will be made.

SEWER PLANT IS UP TO PEOPLE

the event that the bonds carry, reduces the sewage to clear water without odor. Instances are cited, based on reliable authority, where parties have camped for the day beside the outlet of the Pasadena plant and picnicked, thinking that they were beside some mountain stream. The state board of health has thoroughly investigated the tentative system for Glendale and has inspected the property being discussed as the tentative location of the disposal plant. In their findings they reported the location ideal, being removed from any dwelling and of such soil that all moisture will rapidly absorb and that the plant will adequately handle the sewage of the city. Official approval of the proposed system was given.

Engineers are working on an estimate of the cost of installing such a system and when they complete their work the plan will be presented to the people. If the people want sewers it is a matter for them to decide. The city council is in favor of installing a general system but if the people do not want it, the council will abide by their decision.

The system planned will not be installed at one time but will go in unit by unit and will not thrust a great financial burden on the taxpayers at one time. Each unit as it is installed will be in such condition that it can be used as a part of the general system by joining the main trunk lines. The proposed system will handle, by gravity flow, from 80 to 90 per cent of the sewage of the city.

City Manager Reeves, in discussing the tentative plans for the system today, said that the disposal plant and its present locaiton will not injure adjoining property at all. It will be practically invisible, as the tanks are to be underground, and will be odorless. In any event, the whole matter of a sewer system will be for the people to decide when the matter is put to a vote.

According to the latest reports, a great many of the cotton mills remaining in Germany are again in operation.

ROOTS AND TUBERS

Jerry Finch regarded his big baked potato with unfriendly eyes. It was smoking hot, and a little river of melted butter ran down into its mealy white depths.

"I hate potatoes," said Jerry crossly.

His mother regarded him with loving concern—his father with displeasure.

"Big baked potatoes are good for you," said Sister Sue in the grown-up way that made Jerry furious.

"Lots of hungry men sitting on the park benches who would love your potato," said Brother Ben, whom Jerry adored.

And without another word Jerry attacked his potato and ate it all, with determination. He was thinking of the cold looking, shivering men he saw every day in the park just behind the city library.

Brother Ben Talks of Tubers

After supper Brother Ben, who was studying to be a missionary, and going out to China for the rest of his life, called Jerry into his study.

"What is a tuber?" as asked, casually.

Jerry, standing on one foot, did not know.

Tubers, are vegetables with a thickened, underground stem, are very important articles of food," said Ben, treating Jerry as if he was grown up.

"It's just remarkable how many roots and tubers there are in the vegetable kingdom," Ben continued, "that are necessary, to feed the human race."

"Roots?" questioned Jerry. Surely Brother Ben was not in earnest about roots being good to eat, he pondered.

"Didn't you know? Carrots and parsnips and onions and turnips and beets! They are roots," said Ben.

Small Jerry Interested

"But why—?" began Jerry, then hesitated. So Ben waved him to a seat in his big shabby armchair and told him some facts about roots that made potatoes almost interesting to the small boy.

"Potatoes are the most important starch yielding tubers," said Ben.

"Starch?" amazed Jerry.

"Lots of it," nodded Ben.

"Starch and sugar. But there is more water in potatoes than one would think."

Jerry, very wide-eyed, was all attention.

"I didn't know a potato had starch and sugar and water in it," he said.

"It has some fat, too," said Ben.

"And the beet has a large percentage of sugar in it," he added. "Also starch."

Are Full of Surprises

"Vegetables are full of surprises. Take carrots and parsnips, for example. They contain lots of sugar, while radishes are full of cellulose, and not good for sick people."

Jerry did not know what cellulose was, so he nodded.

"There's a good deal of sulphur in onions," continued Ben, "and the next time you feel like scorning a baked potato just think of all the good starches and sugars stored away in it. And don't leave a scrap of it, if you want to have a muscle like mine!"

And, regarding Ben's strong right arm respectfully, Jerry promised to eat potatoes without a murmur in future.

Our Helpers

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc.

(Copyright, 1921, by The Associated Newspapers.)

We hear a great deal about self-made men. Progressing despite the lack of certain advantages other men have had, we may, in fact, be inclined boastfully to account ourselves among the self-made.

Yet by so doing we should take to ourselves undue credit. As all take who plume themselves on being their own makers.

Invariably forces outside themselves have a part in the making of men. Ancestors of whom they may never have heard bear a share in their shaping. A still greater contribution is made by the surroundings in which they are reared, particularly by people in these surroundings.

Aye, and by people dead and gone, of no blood relationship, but transmitters of formative ideas through the books they have written, the pictures they have painted, the music they have composed, the scientific discoveries and inventions they have achieved.

Search the early histories of the so-called self-made, and always it will be found that they had helpers in the present, helpers from the past, to advance their interests. No successful man, no matter how unfortunate his immediate antecedents, no matter how disadvantageous his early upbringing, has been quite devoid of helpers.

If he had been thus devoid he could not possbly have been successful. For, being without sources of information and inspiration, he would have grown to manhood an ignoramus, spinelessly unambitious.

His father may have been a drunkard, but the son had helpful friends who did not drink. He may have been forced to leave school at an unduly early age, but already his teacher or some other helper had roused in him a craving for knowledge.

The example of his father might have made him shiftless, worthless. Fortunately there were around him better men, whose example gripped his imagination more. These other men—were they not helpers in his making, even though they made no conscious effort to help?

And long-dead writers of stimulating books that he chanced to read while young—would one deny that they, too, may have had a decisive part in his making, that at all events they had some part? A single phrase from Homer, a line from Shakespeare, the hurriedly scrawled creed of some unnamed modern captain of industry, may have provided the spark that set his ambition flaming gloriously.

Always one encounters helpers when a search for helpers begins. The self-made man is a myth, is an impossibility.

Which suggests, of course, that the so-called self-made man may in his turn be a notable, if unconscious, helper in the making of other men. He is almost certain to be such. Assuredly he will be, if acquaintance with him or knowledge of his career inspires in others the wish to rise.

And this, after all, will be much more to his credit than ability to point proudly to himself with an "I made me." To those who help most belongs of right most glory. For to help is the great purpose and mission of man, the earthly destiny for which he was created.

When all men sense this, then will the world be the garden of happiness and high endeavor God intended it to be.

MURPHY FINDS NEED FOR ROOM

Furniture Business Expands Rapidly, Business Grows

That a man possessed of energy and good business judgment can build up a big business in the face of the strongest competition is evidenced by the success of William P. Murphy, who has one of the largest furniture stores in Glendale, and whose business has grown so rapidly during the last few months that he has been compelled to rent an additional store room.

Mr. Murphy, like all conservative business men, made a modest start for he felt that it was best to try out his line of business in that particular location before branching out. He soon found that if one can "deliver the goods," give good service, right prices, etc., business will come. As a result, he now enjoys a big business, and has found it necessary to add new lines and carry a larger and more varied stock.

The success of Mr. Murphy has been a stimulus to others, for three new store rooms have been erected adjoining Murphy's furniture store. Mr. Murphy says that he will take the large store room adjoining his business as soon as it is completed. It will give him nearly 3,000 feet of floor space for his furniture and household furnishings business. He will also add new lines, carry more stock and otherwise prepare himself to better serve the public.

THOMAS HULL IS KEPT VERY BUSY

Thomas Hull of Colorado street, who is acting today as officer of the day in the ceremonies connected with the installation of new officers of N. P. Banks Post, G. A. R., was sent for to go to Whittier within the week to perform the same service for Sedgwick Post, G. A. R., that city, when new officers were installed.

Harrison W. Frank of Los Angeles was the dinner guest Tuesday night at the home of his mother, Mrs. H. Frank, 1558 East Wilson avenue.

ATTRACTIVE EVENING WRAP AND FROCK THAT SUGGESTS THE WESTERN PLAINS

The evening wrap shown above at the left is up to the minute in its lines. It is of embroidered indestructible chiffon voile and pussy willow satin. At first glance the photograph at the right suggests the cow girl, but the broad hat which looks somewhat like a sombrero is the only touch of the western plains. Really the frock is a very simple thing in pussy willow.

Music Memory Contest Begins on January 25th

Wednesday, January 18, is the date set for a committee meeting called by officers of the Glendale Music club to be held in the evening in the music room of the high school, when representatives of all organizations in the city will meet for conference in regard to the proposed memory contest.

It is to begin January 25 and continue until the last week in February. A list of the records to be played during the first four weeks of the contest are given below. The fifth week will be devoted to a review of the records and to final preparations for the contest. The date of the final try-out will be announced later, with full details.

Club members and citizens generally, are asked to contribute any of these records which they have and are willing to part with, and they will be used in the schools and clubs and other places in which the contest numbers will be played. Following the contest they will be turned over to the county library to be used as a traveling library of records for rural schools too poor to buy them. Some of them may be returned for our own grammar schools who have need of them. The high school is fortunate in having the full list.

Donors who will attend the concert to be given by the Junior Auxiliary before the parent club January 20, may bring the records and turn them over to officers prepared to receive them, or they may deliver them, carefully marked for the Glendale Music club to the Glendale Music Company (Salmacia Bros.) on North Brand. Following is a list of the contest records:

1. Largo—by Handel.
2. "Hallelujah Chorus," Handel.
3. "Morning," ("Peer Gynt"), Grieg.

CONWAY TEARLE IN DIFFICULT ROLE

"Society Snobs" Give Versatile Actor Hard Task

It would be difficult to imagine a more difficult role for a hero than that of a waiter. People just naturally don't connect waiters and romance together. Yet Conway Tearle in "Society Snobs," his latest picture, now showing at the Glendale theatre, invests even this menial characterization with real personality.

The foibles and absurdities of society are pictured by the merciless pen of Lewis Allen Browne, who has a particularly happy faculty of driving right to the heart of things. The dangers to which ambitious mothers heedlessly expose their daughters are vividly set forth. Gorgeous settings are plentiful and it is easily seen that no expense was spared in making the picture in every respect as it is among the extravagant members of the idle nouveau riche.

Conway Tearle as Lorenzo Carilo, a young Italian of good birth who has been forced to take a position as waiter in the Ritz restaurant because of financial difficulties, manages to look aristocratic even in his waiter's garb. Martha Mansfield as the debutante daughter of newly rich parents not only looks beautiful, but shows splendid ability as an actress. In certain tense scenes she shows great repressed emotional power.

The Barton Bedtime Stories

THE SUPRISING RABBIT

By JOHN BARTON

(Copyright, 1921, by Associated Newspapers)

For a long time after it escaped from its prison in the barn the Red Dog listened carefully for an automobile. That was the only thing it feared. It's master would surely guess which way it went the minute he found it was gone. But nobody was stirring so very early in the morning. The dog had almost forgotten to pay attention when the first one hummed past.

It tucked its tail between its legs and leaped into the ditch. Luckily it wasn't the car it had ridden in the night before. But the Red Dog knew mighty well that it might come any time. The road wasn't safe. It must take to the fields. That was slower going, for it had to hunt for holes in many a fence—sometimes go a long way around. But presently it came out on a strange road that led in the right direction. On it went, hour after hour. The old sun crept across the sky, lower and lower, as evening came and the cold wind bit through the poor dog's silky coat. It passed one cross-road after another; then, quite suddenly it stopped. It felt here was the place to turn.

It felt this just like Whisk Whippoorwill felt the straight path to the nest where he was hatched. For the Red Dog was ownerless now, but already it could feel the place it wanted to call "home." It struck straight through the woods. Pretty soon it came out in a wide, hilly field, which rolled down to a marsh. The mud sucked at its feet in a scary way and the water was far too cold for anything but the furry folk to swim in, so it began to look for some way to go around.

Suddenly it saw a dark shape moving in the bulrushes. "A rabbit!" thought the dog. I didn't mean ever to hunt again, but I'm just so starvation hungry I've got to catch this one." It began to creep cautiously toward the unsuspecting beast. It crouched to jump——

"Meiau," spoke up a voice no bunny ever owned. "Is that you Trailer?"

The Red Dog sat back on its haunches with surprise. "A cat!" it gasped. "What are you doing way off here, all alone?"

The Red Dog Sat Back on Its Haunches With Surprise

"Hunting," answered the cat, smiling behind his whiskers. "How about you?"

"I'm hunting, too," said the dog. Then realizing who it was about to hunt it hurried to explain. "That is, I'm hunting for Dr. Muskrat's Pond."

"For Dr. Muskrat's Pond!" the pussy mewed. "Why, who are you?"

big villa sites $1000 and up

honestly built homes $7,500 to $12,000

---there's activity at Verdugo Woodlands

Thousands of people from all sections of Los Angeles and environs are visiting the glorious green woodland heights above this progressive city—and they are wide-awake to the buying and building activity in progress. They are keenly alive to the unsurpassed beauty of this evergreen vale and the potential investment value of its home-sites.

Glendale folks are beginning to realize what a glorious foothill paradise lies on the slopes just above them. They know what happened over in the Hollywood foothill district—and they foresee a repetition of development and value-creating on the eminences of this rapidly growing community.

Why build your home—or buy one—in the flat, uninteresting sections of the city? Why not join the nature-loving colony happily established in this delightful valley among the green Verdugo hills? Live where the very environment is a constant inspiration—where you'll find peace, quiet, contentment, and rest.

Big villa sites at $1000 and upwards. Honestly-built homes at $7500 to $12,000.

FRIDAY THE 13TH GETTING NO KICK

Superstitiously Inclined People Waiting for Midnight

Today being Friday and today being the 13th, superstitiously inclined people are getting a magnificent "kick" out of the coincident. No one has been killed, so far, because they allowed a black cat to cross the pathway in front of him or her, and no one has yet reported that the moon made faces at a chipmunk at midnight.

However, W. C. Page of the Page Furniture Co., 306 East Broadway, declares that he was born on Friday and for that reason he is inclined to consider Friday a lucky day whether it be on the 13th or 33rd. Mr. Page declares that every time Friday comse on the 13th of the month he finds himself better off than the day before, so "he should worry" about the "hoodoo stuff."

Gen. Gridley Chapter D. A. R. Is Entertained

General Richard Gridley chapter, D. A. R., was delightfully entertained Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. T. W. Preston on North Jackson street, with 25 members and guests present.

Illness confined the regent, Mrs. John Hyde Braly, to her home, and with her gone it did not seem like a session of the chapter, although the vice-regent, Mrs. C. H. Houston, presided most efficiently and with grace and dignity. "How much we miss Mrs. Braly!" was the general theme of conversation before and after the chapter session, and by unanimous vote the secretary was requested to send a note to Mrs. Braly on behalf of the organization, expressing its love and the great void which was felt because of her absence and that of Mr. Braly.

Subscriptions were taken for the mile of pennies ($840) which the chapter undertook to raise for the maternity hospital on Utah street, Los Angeles, which is the special object of the benevolence of the chapter. The amount subscribed totalled in round numbers $85, which Mr. Braly had agreed to duplicate, and at the next meeting of the chapter, which will be held at the maternity hospital February 2, the mile will be completed and presented to the hospital.

Mrs. W. N. Rathbun, member of the committee on Americanization, reported concerning the contributions to the Christmas party for the Albion street school in Los Angeles, a district in which Americanization work is being carried on. Mrs. Rathbun also reported donations of fruit for the maternity hospital, and of stock for the salvage shop which is being operated for the benefit of the hospital.

No formal program had been arranged, but the hostess called upon guests who had recently come to Glendale and who had belonged to D. A. R. chapters elsewhere, to give a history of their connection with the order and the work done by chapters with which they had been identified. Mrs. Neil Carson, who had come from Newcastle, Pa., which is quite a manufacturing center, told of D. A. R. work there.

Mrs. Andrews, recently of Long Beach, but originally a member of a New York chapter, told of its activities, similar in many respects to those of the Glendale chapter.

Mrs. E. M. Kennedy of Okmulgee, Okla., told of certain out-door programs given by the chapter there in which trees were studied, and of the planting of trees along a public highway as a memorial to the ex-service men. She also told of a council house used by the whites and Indians in an early day, and of a historic tree on which Indians who preyed upon the whites were hanged.

Mrs. Houston reminded the chapter of the project to buy a portion of Forest Lawn memorial park as a burial place for ex-service men, and of the probability that the organization would be asked to help.

Mrs. H. C. Foulk of St. Joseph, Mo., told of good work done by the chapter there, to which she belonged, and which numbered 90 members. Programs for the year were outlined in advance. Last year the chapter studied the history of Missouri. This year it will concentrate on "Americanization." She told of a statue erected by the state as a monument to the pony express, which started there.

Mrs. Blanchard, from the Mary Knight chapter of northeastern Iowa, stated that it represented the D. A. R.'s in Edgewood and three other towns. It has regular monthly meetings and programs and devotes more time to effort along historic lines than philanthropy.

Mrs. W. Q. Widows told of the Caroline Scott Harrison chapter in Indianapolis with a membership of 800 to 1,000, in which she had been enrolled. She described its active work during the war which represented thousands of dollars contributed to the Red Cross, and of its activities on behalf of disabled soldiers since the war. She came to Glendale from San Diego and expects to become affiliated here.

Mrs. W. W. McElroy told of her visit to the beautiful D. A. R. hall in Washington.

Mrs. Houston read portions of an interesting article in the D. A. R. magazine describing the presentation to the officials of the devastated French town of Tilleloy of a system of water works which had been provided by a fund of $5,000 subscribed by D. A. R. chapters, the ceremonies in connection being attended by prominent officials of the French government, who expressed the sentiments of gratitude held by the French people for Americans.

Mrs. Weston of Boston, now living in Verdugo canyon, told of the Lowell, Mass., chapter.

There was some discussion relative to the misuse of the flag under the rules laid down, which prescribe that it shall be suspended and hung straight, or upon a pole, and never draped over a piano or other article of furniture or over an automobile engine or tonneau, which it may possibly trail in the dust of the wheels. Mrs. E. W. Hayward was delegated to take action reminding the public of these laws governing the flag.

Members present were Mesdames R. D. Goff, S. C. Leppelman, C. W. Houston, T. W. Preston, W. N. Rathbun, Lizzie M. Peirce, Wayland Chapman, S. H. Butterfield, H. A. Strong, A. B. Purrier, E. W. W. Hayward, J. H. Franklin, Ida Belle Potter, Herbert H. Mann, W. M. Brown, Mabel Franklin Ocker and Miss Ida Myers. The guest list included Mesdames Nevin Carson, E. M. Kennedy, W. Q. Widows, W. W. McElroy, W. A. Sawyer, H. C. Foulk, Neil H. Andrews, Theodora Peirce and W. F. Weston, and Miss Eloise P. Andrews.

Following the session refreshments of tea and cake were served by the hostess.

AUXILIARY MET TO MAKE PLANS

The first meeting of the new year of the Women's auxiliary of the Glendale Congregational church took place Thursday and was conducted by the president, Mrs. Geo. Colson. Her assisting officers are Mrs. Lauderdale, vice-president; Mrs. L. T. Rowley, secretary, and Mrs. A. R. Chapman, treasurer.

A decision has been reached to divide the organization into three sections represented by the portion of Glendale west of Central and north of Wilson; the section west of Central and south of Wilson, and the section east of Central both north and south of Wilson. It is believed that these smaller groups can work to advantage and that competition will be a spur to endeavor. The southwest section will meet with Mrs. Miner next Monday, and the east section with Mrs. Colson Thursday, January 19.

Last year the auxiliary pledged itself to raise for the church fund, within three years, $1500. As this amount has been earned to within $240, the organization took a new pledge to raise another $1500 within two years.

The meeting was well attended especially the luncheon, which was served at noon.

MRS. WATTLES WAS HOSTESS THURSDAY

Mrs. W. C. Wattles of south Glendale avenue was hostess at a luncheon Thursday at which places were indicated for Mrs. Edward Lynch and her mother, Mrs. Wood, Mrs. Edward Weston, Mrs. Joseph Webster, and Mrs. T. C. Wattles of Los Angeles.

French bouquets of mixed flowers centered the beautifully appointed table and adorned the living room where the ladies spent a pleasant social afternoon following the luncheon.

DEACONESSES AT LOS ANGELES TUESDAY

On Tuesday the deaconesses of Central Christian church motored to Los Angeles where they were the guests of Mrs. Fred Thompson, 432 South Lake street, who is also a deaconess.

A delightful luncheon was served at noon and the afternoon was spent in making plans for this year's work. The guests were Mrs. R. Jodon, Miss Mary Chester, Mrs. Floyd Mercer, Mrs. E. H. Learned and Mrs. Eva Hutton all of Glendale.

BIBLE CLASS MET WITH MRS. BAKER

The Glendale Inter-denominational Bible Class, under the leadership of Mrs. J. Rhea Baker, met at the home of Mrs. E. N. Smith of 1415 East Colorado street on Thursday afternoon for their monthly social and business meeting.

The annual election of officers took place after which a social hour was enjoyed and delightful refreshments were served. There were about forty members present.

GOLDEN WEDDINGS TO BE CELEBRATED

A special feature of the joint meeting of N. P. Banks Post and Corps today at G. A. R. hall will be the celebration of the golden weddings of Comrade and Mrs. William Collins and Comrade and Mrs. L. W. Hammon.

Just before the big dinner is served there will be a wedding ceremony at which Rev. C. R. Norton, chaplain of the post, will officiate, after which the remarried couples will receive the congratulations of their friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Collins came to California from Illinois, and the Hammons are from Iowa.

Mrs. Kretchmer, president-elect of the Women's Relief Corps, states that appointive offices have been filled by her as follows: Color bearers, No. 1, Mrs. Westfall; No. 2, Mrs. Starkey; No. 3, Mrs. Haven; No. 4, Mrs. Bowen. Press correspondent, Mrs. Weimer; patriotic instructor, Mrs. Bowen. Committee chairmen have been named as follows: Conference, Mrs. Pixley; executive, Mrs. Tincher; auditing, Mrs. Shattuck; relief for the northwest, Mrs. Peckham; relief for east side, Mrs. Wright; relief for south side, Mrs. Bowen; relief for Burbank, Mrs. Susie Howell; flower committee, Mrs. Hammond; employment, Mrs. Saunders.

The installation of corps officers will follow the serving of the dinner, which will be in charge of Mrs. R. L. Milligan, past president of the corps.

CAMPFIRE GIRLS MET THURSDAY

The Soangetaha Camp Fire girls met Thursday afternoon at the home of Miss Gilson, their guard, 326 Sast Colorado street. The meeting proved to be a very "peppy" one and it was decided that the girls would take an over-night trip to Camp Baldy January 28.

After the business had been taken care of the meeting was adjourned and they practiced camp fire songs and were served dainty refreshments by the hostess.

ST. MARK'S GUILD NAMES COMMITTEES

St. Mark's Guild met Thursday afternoon in the Guild hall, with 35 ladies present.

A very interesting meeting was held and the following committees were appointed for the coming year by the new president, Mrs. Mortimer Baker: Executive committee Mrs. Holbrook, chairman, Mrs. Humphrey, Mrs. S. F. Card; advertising committee, Mrs. Helen Campbell, Mrs. Mrs. Gertrude Bassett; publicity secretary, Mrs. S. F. Card; reception committee, Mrs. McOmber, Mrs. Bassett, Mrs. Bosserman, Mrs. Farber, Mrs. Humphrey, Miss Ellen Williams; scripture monitors, Mrs. Trotter, Mrs. Galer, Mrs. Murphy, Mrs. Wells, Miss Williams, Mrs. Downing.

Plans were made to give a big dinner at the Guild hall on January 26, at 6 p. m.

CENTRAL AVENUE P. T. A. MEETING

The Central Avenue Parent-Teacher Association met at the school Thursday afternoon with the head of the organization, Mrs. C. H. Parker, presiding.

She told of the Christmas party given for children of the school by their room mothers, also of the remembrances for the disabled veterans at Thornycroft in the shape of Christmas stockings.

Mrs. Pauline Barrington gave a delightful talk on the modern poets, and readings from "Johnny Appleseed," in a popular magazine. She declared that everyone should have a hobby and parents should be on the lookout for the hobby in the child.

Mrs. Lura J. Burritt gave three beautiful vocal solos—"The Cry of Rachel" (Salter); "The Rain of Flowers," by Searis, and "Harmony" by Rieto. Miss Gladys Sharpe served as her accompanist.

Mrs. Emery's room (first grade) won the picture for the month of January, having the largest number of mothers present.

Tea and cake were served during a social half hour which followed the program.

MRS. VERNON PUTMAN HOSTESS AT LUNCHEON

Mrs. Vernon Putman of 208 West Elk street, had the great pleasure of entertaining old friends at luncheon on Thursday, viz: Mr. and Mrs. Parr of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. Bates and Mr. and Mrs. Newby and little daughter from Pawnee, Okla.

Following the luncheon the party motored to the Los Angeles aqueduct. Mr. and Mrs. Bates and the Newbys are much impressed with Southern California, especially Glendale, and may locate here or in some other suburb.

ALL DAY MEETING AT METHODIST CHURCH

Women's societies of the First Methodist church held an all-day meeting Thursday, the forenoon being devoted to a business session of the Ladies' Aid. An exceedingly nice luncheon was served at noon by the ladies of the First Section, covers being laid for about 200.

During the early part of the afternoon the Women's Foreign Missionary society held a most interesting and largely attended meeting which was addressed by Miss Harvey, a returned missionary from India who made a rather wonderful talk in which she outlined in a large and general way conditions in the field in which she has been at work.

An entertaining talk was also made by Mrs. Insley, secretary of the Los Angeles district, who was a guest.

Five new members were received into the society, which pledged itself to raise $500 for the Union College in the foreign field.

Following this session the Home Missionary society held a business meeting and after that a missionary band was organized, composed of about 35 girls who presented themselves for the purpose and to whom refreshments were served following the organization.

BETTY JANE STEWART

This is the natal day of Bettie Jane Stewart. If every one could face a new year with uplifted head and the confidence shown by this dear baby, there would be no failures in this world. Though to some people life may be serious business in which frivolity should have small place, Bettie's look into the future spells courage and optimism which will make her continue to be the light of the home which she came to bless January 13, 1920.

Betty is beginning to realize the responsibility confronting her in properly bringing up modern parents and is succeeding in her work. All she need do is smile, and her parents do as she desires.

Her name indicates that she is of Scotch ancestry and probably endowed with second sight which will enable her to see the good fairies all around her, invisible to the dull-eyed mortals that most of us are.

The sweet little mystic is the first and only grandchild of Mrs. Louise Stocker, the presiding genius of the C. & S. Cafeteria, on North Brand, and is the darling of her grandmother's heart—it is a big one.

Bettie Jane's parents are Mr. and Mrs. James P. Stewart, of 346 Doran street, who have been residents of Glendale for nearly three years. Mr. Stewart is assistant superintendent of the Prudential Life Insurance company in Los Angeles, and feels that he will have to step some to be the worthy father of such a glorious little daughter. Anyhow, today is Betty's second birthday and she doesn't care who knows it.

NEWTON ELECTRIC CO. AT HOME OF J. A. NEWTON

A get-together meeting of the personnel of J. A. Newson Electrical company was held Thursday night at the home of J. A. Newton, 521 North Jackson street. There has been a change in the personnel of the firm since the first of the year as follows: J. A. Newton, president and general manager; O. W. Andresen, secretary and office manager; W. E. Hibbard, store and factory manager; W. L. Hyde, foreman of the wiring department and outside service; W. M. Newton, manager of stock and cost department; A. M. Kelly, manager of store service department, and George H. Britton, foreman of fixture-making department. There are 25 people now in the employ of the J. A. Newton company, and the meeting was a social one as well as one of business, many of the wives being present.

After plans had been made for this year's work, a dainty refreshment course was served by the hostess, everything being cooked electrically. The Newton house is equipped throughout with electricity.

These meetings will be held from now on about one a month or every six weeks and there will be meetings of department heads probably once a week.

Charity is a cloak that covers a multitude of queer performances.

CREAM CLEARS A STUFFED-UP HEAD

Instantly Opens Every Air Passage—Clears Throat Too.

If your nostrils are clogged and your head is stuffed because of nasty catarrh or a cold, apply a little pure, antiseptic cream into your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage, soothing and healing swollen, inflamed membranes and you get instant relief.

Try this. Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Your clogged nostrils open right up; your head is clear; no more hawking or snuffling. Count fifty. All the stuffiness, dryness, struggling for breath is gone. You feel fine.—Adv.

For Dark Woodwork

The best way to clean dark-colored painted doors and woodwork, is to take a pail of clean warm water and pour a little paraffin into it, and then wash the paint all over, working downward with a piece of old Turkish toweling. Next dry with a piece of clean cloth and polish with a substantial duster. To attempt to clean such paint by hard rubbing is a mistake. It does not need it and will only be rubbed away.

Pat Down Sausage Cakes

When frying down sausages in cakes, after mixing take a bunch of the meat and pat it together and roll out like a roll of butter or meat loaf, making it as thick as you wish the cakes. Set away until the next day in a cool place, then slice down. The result will be firmer cakes which in frying will hold together better. If the roll is not perfectly round the slices can be easily rounded by patting with the hands.

AND TOMORROW IS SATURDAY! Somehow, Saturday appeals to us more as a shopping day! It is a day seemingly set aside from all others to be devoted by women to shopping! And that's why in these columns on Friday nights you'll find that I've given special attention to the seeking out of the best places to go to do one's shopping on Saturday, here, because their prices seem lower than their competitors, there because a special clearance sale marks a great saving to you—and so on! The merchants represented here are always endeavoring to give you the very best quality—and at prices you can easily afford to pay. At least before you go to a neighboring city to shop, look around and inquire about their prices and goods—then compare them with the larger dealers, and I'm sure you'll agree with me, that Buy in Glendale is a most profitable slogan.

Make Firelighters of Clay

The manufacturer of a firelighter from clay deposits found on his land is being undertaken by a farmer in Saskatchewan. This deposit is the only known one of its kind on the American continent, although considerable quantities of this clay are also found in Germany. The firelighter is in the form of a brick. It is soaked in kerosene for a few minutes, and when it has absorbed a quantity a match is applied. The brick will burn for a half hour with a steady flame, and when exhausted can be replenished with kerosene and used indefinitely. Other uses to which this clay can be put are: Kalsomine, filler for paper, cleansing powders, white shoe polish and brick or tile of the very best quality.—Scientific American.

For Graduation Dress

Dotted swiss is a material which will be used this year for graduation dresses. While it lacks the crispness of organdie, it has an individual beauty and requires almost no trimming. The plain skirt with wide hem, from 10 to 18 or even 20 inches in width, looks well.

Tucks either in organdie or swiss are always attractive if well placed. The number of tucks should be uneven, as three or five, and the spaces between the tucks should be narrower or wider than the tucks.

BURBANK NEWS

WOMAN'S CLUB TO BUILD A HOME

Serious consideration is being given by the Woman's club to the matter of a clubhouse to be built some time in the not far distant future, and committees have been named to visit clubhouses with a view to getting ideas for plans for Burbank. The club of this city now owns two lots, or a frontage of 100 feet, on Orange Grove avenue between Seventh and Eighth streets, and a committee has been announced to investigate the price of lots as it is advised by some of the members that these be sold and others more centrally located be purchased. A council of the officers and all committees has been called for the afternoon of January 31, when the ways and means of the proposition will be thoroughly discussed.

The regular meeting of the club was a particularly interesting session Tuesday. R. W. Colburn, executive secretary of the chamber of commerce, made a splendid short talk in which he earnestly solicited the cooperation of the club membership in the work of the chamber. He made the objective point that any effort which has not the sympathy of women was destined to failure.

Mrs. Margaret Yale, attorney, made an explanatory talk on legislative bills which are of particular importance to women. Of these she spoke of the maternity bill; the Towner-Sterling bill, which proposes to create a federal department of education with a secretary in the cabinet, and the bill just introduced in congress to amend the constitution and give women equal rights with men, which she discussed and explained from both the positive and negative points of view.

The club has agreed to manage a drive for the raising of $500 for the Salvation Army. This will be undertaken soon.

On February 21 reciprocity day will be observed. This will be an event of large social importance as all the presidents in the district are invited to be present and many of them will come. Luncheon will be served and a program rendered.

The Misses Paula Young and Fay Williams and Pat Walker and Ransom Kelley, and Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, had a wonderful day Sunday when they went to Mt. Lowe. Aside from enjoying the charms of nature they had the fun of throwing snowballs while on the mountain top.

L. E. Krull, wife and son, of Minnesota, who have been guests at the home of Mrs. Krull's brother, C. W. Denhart, 416 Farley court, have left for Redlands where they will visit Mrs. Krull's and Mr. Denhart's father.

City Clerk and Mrs. Webster attended the funeral Saturday of Mr. Webster's aunt, Mrs. Susan Smith of Glendale.

GIRLS' LEAGUE TO GIVE HIGH JINKS

The Girls' league, a splendid organization of the schools, will give an entertainment in the auditorium of the grammar school on the evening of January 21 under the direction of Miss Weinstock. The different classes will give a program all their own and the especially delightfully phase of it is the speculating as to what each one is going to do in the way of entertainment, for every class keeps its program a secret.

All that is known is merely that there will be little plays and vocal and instrumental music and readings and fancy drills and dances. The proceeds from the entertainment will be used in the promotion of the interests of the league.

Mrs. Attelia L. Thomas, aged 74 years, died at the Atherton Villa Wednesday, after an illness of pneumonia. She is survived by a daughter, Miss Miller, who is employed in the telephone office; Mrs. Gibbs of this city and Mrs. Higgins of Long Beach, and a son, E. L. Thomas of Santa Barbara. The deceased had resided in California for the past 12 years and in Burbank for two years.

The funeral was in charge of A. C. Fillbach and conducted at the Methodist church in Long Beach at 1 o'clock Friday.

BROKE A FINGER

Deputy Marshal Wilson is suffering from a broken finger which is the result of too close and sudden proximity to the hard head of a Wandering Willie. When out on duty bound, Wilson encountered one of the many "bums" now around these parts, and, in attempting to round him up, the fellow pulled a knife on the deputy and he, in turn, landed on his opponent's head with such force as to break a finger on the right hand.

EASTERN STARS

This evening the Eastern Star lodge of Burbank will go to Glendale to participate in the reception to the worthy grand matron, Maude Bradley. The Eagle Rock lodge will also be present. The Burbank lodge will demonstrate balloting; Glen Eyrie lodge of Glendale will demonstrate the opening and closing exercises, and Eagle Rock will put on the escort duty. A banquet will follow the work.

Mrs. J. K. Keeton and daughter, of Winslow, Ariz., have returned home after a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Brent, and with her sister, Mrs. Wayland Wood.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Borhman of Tuna canyon are the parents of a baby girl. Mrs. Borhman has returned home from the hospital.

AMBASSADOR HARVEY WITH NOTABLES ATTENDS THE OPENING OF PARLIAMENT

New Year Brings New Thrills In Theatrical World

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—Thinking it all over, maybe the old year is glad to die.

At least it will be spared seeing any more bad plays produced.

The closing week of the year just up and ignored all theatrical precedents. Even Christmas Eve was taken up by Norman Trevor's production of "The Married Woman," and it's no Christmas gift to make you want to kiss Santa Claus.

But on Monday, the official Christmas, we had four premieres! Not content with that, the Shuberts gave us something else to think about by opening another new theater — the Forty-ninth street.

Won't somebody please tell the Shuberts that play building is about as important as theater building in the dramatic game? They wouldn't pay any attention to me. Which bring us to the real motif of this lament.

Why doesn't some up-and-going playwright write a good play for that incomparable actor, Leo Ditrichstein? Of all the figures on the American stage today, none equals him for finished technique, artistry, personality, positive dramatic genius. And yet this really great artist is being wasted on inadequate dramas. Of course, in this season of depressingly bad plays we see a lot of bad acting which adds consistency at least to the situation. But with Ditrichstein it is quite another matter. His coming to New York as well as to other cities is a long anticipated event.

Ditrichstein opened the new Shubert Forty-ninth street theater in "Face Value," an adaption from the Italian by Solita Solano. The second act of the play alone gave Ditrichstein any chance. And in this act he was fortunate in the responsive and understanding acting of Frances Underwood. But a second act doesn't make a play any more than a swallow makes a summer. "Face Value" is a comedy based upon the assumption that a clever ugly man can equal a manly beauty in the love game. And Ditrichstein, in a red pompadoured wig and horn-rimmed goggles goes through a part which is longer than that of Hamlet. Of course we always picture Leo Ditrichstein as the very quintessence of ultra-sophisticated drama, elegante, fine, with either pathos or comedy of the subtlest type. He belongs only in a setting of the very highest class—and this he has not in the present production.

Of course, no play, no matter how inadequate, could ever conceal the light of Ditrichstein's art beneath the bushel of mediocrity. Let's hope the great American dramatist is not far around the corner of the new year with a vehicle for this great actor.

With Ditrichstein apotheosizing ugliness, William Faversham revived "The Squaw Man," with BEAUTY in the ascendent. Mrs. Lydig Hoyt, high society favorite, whose exquisite beauty is worth the price of admission to gaze upon, gave the revival a "400" air. Mrs. Hoyt's art has not as yet produced a stir, but her beauty of face and figure is a pretty good reason of being. Edwin Milton Royle's daughter, Josephine, gives a striking example of inherited ability in her excellent portrayal of the Indian wife, and the beautiful Winifred Harris shows us what a real English grand dame should be.

The same day saw the English melodrama "Bulldog Hammond" open and then—

Why is it Olga Petrova makes us think of a feminine Jack-of-all-trades? Mme. Petrova is a musician, painter, possessor of an astoundingly acquired mass of information and ideas which she divulges as a writer, a movie actress, playwright, foreign accent, exotic beauty and great courage. But she stars her acting— also she wrote "The White Peacock," in which she opened Monday for herself—which doesn't add much to the cheero of the new year.

Why—but what's the use?

During the 10 months the cigarmakers in Tampa, Fla., have been idle owing to the dispute over wages, the government has lost $1,500,000 in revenues.

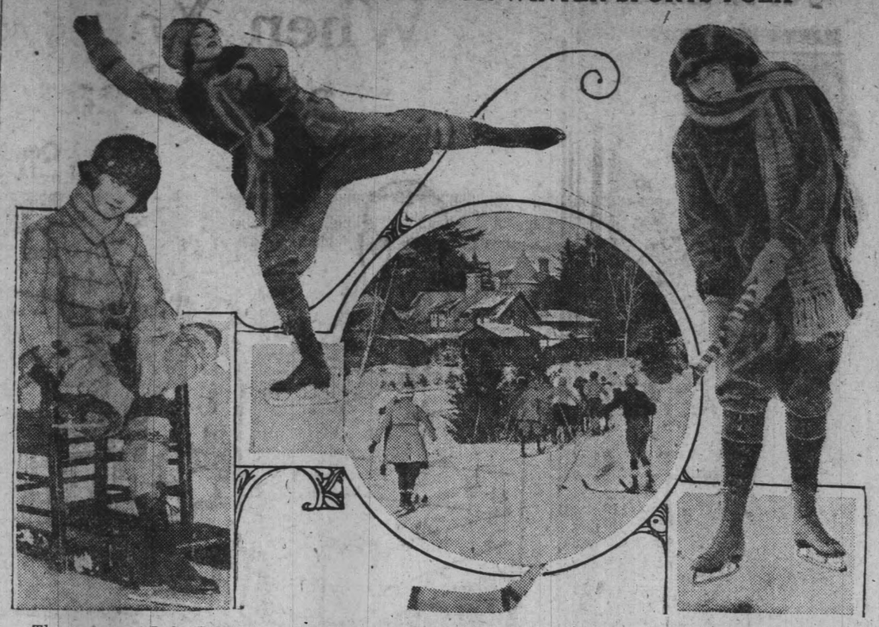
LAKE PLACID THE MECCA FOR WINTER SPORTS FOLK



The season at Lake Placid, New York, is now on in full swing. Many of the visitors there have in former years gone to Switzerland for the winter sports, but now they claim they find all the sports they want at this resort. People from all over the country are making Lake Placid their winter mecca. The above illustration shows some of the fair participants enjoying themselves. In the lower left-hand corner is Miss Kathleen Davis of Galveston, Texas, adjusting her skates, preliminary to taking a spin over the ice. Above her is Miss Halan Kosloff of Warsaw, Poland, who spends many hours entertaining her friends with exhibitions of fancy figure skating. In the center are members of the younger set off on the scent in the Hare and Hounds Skiing tourney, and on the right is Miss Marie Ringler of New York, an ardent hockey enthusiast.

Fashions for Americans

Pajama negligees have long been popular, but among the newest of the harem effects are those that are only moderately bifurcated and classed as step-ins. One of these garments is shown in the sketch. It is made of a plain silk and fastened on the shoulders with little bows of ribbon that when untied make the garment open entirely across sleeves and neck, so that it is easy to get into. Bands of ribbon trim and belt the garment.

Another model of this same general type recently seen showed the harem skirt, held to the figure by suspenders or shoulder straps of self fabric, with a smock-like garment worn over it, the smock extending just about to the hips. Vivid yellow satin was the fabric used for this outfit, with monkey fur as the trimming.

Not every woman feels inclined to use silks and satins for her negligee apparel. Heavy cotton crepe is now available in such attractive colorings that very beautiful garments may be made of it.

A very pretty pajama boudoir garment recently seen combined yellow and blue cotton crepe, the pajamas being made of the blue with yellow cuffs, and the jacket of yellow. The foundation garment, as a matter of fact, combined pajamas and short sleeved waist, the jacket of the yellow fabric being merely two wide panels shaped to fit around the arm-holes and seamed on the shoulders. Touches of embroidery in black wool finished the jacket.

Cotton crepe has been found very practical for house dresses, and many charming frocks are possible, combining two colors, or with touches of bright colored embroidery in contrasting shades.

Listening in on Eve

CONCERNING THE YOUNG MAN

"Now, I don't want Adora to have that lank, pop-eyed Bingley Hooper hanging around this house every night in the week," complained Adora's father. "She's not to fancy she's in love at her age, and, anyhow, I'll just as soon have a baby hippopotamus as Bingley for a son-in-law. I can't imagine what she sees in that fellow. He gurgles and chokes instead of talks, and he ties his feet in bowknots around the chair legs, and his hair looks as though it had been sandpapered and varnished. I want Adora, when she marries, to marry someone I can be proud of and take out to my golf club and——"

"I intend to speak to her," Adora's mother told him. "I have noticed myself how frequently he is here, and I must say that there isn't anything very attractive about him. When girls are as young as Adora they are so foolish! Apt to fancy he is the right one and spoil their entire lives! No, I want Adora to select some brisk and clever young man who is good to his mother and lays by part of his salary. This Bingley Hooper is always squandering large sums on foolish boxes of expensive candy for her, and, of course, she thinks it's lovely of him, but I look into the future and——"

"I wouldn't wear his neckties for a farm," put in Adora's younger brother. "What's the use of a brother-in-law if he isn't any use to you?".

"She has so many splendid young men interested in her," went on Adora's mother, "that it seems just stubborn perversity, her fancying this Bingley! I've pointed out to her what a splendid young man Heepworth McPlume is or even Dodley Pillbeck, but she just sniffs and runs to telephone this Bingley——"

"Are you talking about the young man who was here last evening?" asked the slightly deaf rich aunt who was visiting. "I had such a nice little chat with him before Adora came down and I must say she took a long enough time before she came down! You'd think, Bingley Hooper being who he is, she'd acquire a little haste!"

"Being who he is—who is he?" demanded Adora's family in some surprise. "He can't be anybody in particular. He's just a clerk in some office!"

"Bingley Hooper," said the slightly deaf aunt, "is from the town next mine out west and his father owns most of the mines in the state and everything else that isn't nailed down—and Bingley was educated abroad and is here learning clerical details necessary to him when eventually he inherits all his father's property. Bingley is an exceptional young man and takes life seriously and doesn't talk much——"

"My word!" gasped Adora's father. "Not the son of old C. B. Hooper, that the whole world knows about? Yet I can't say that I am very much astonished, because I have always had the feeling that Bingley was hiding his real worth beneath his quiet exterior. I admire a young man who knows enough to keep his mouth shut and doesn't tell all that he knows! Most of the young men hanging about Adora bore me to death about their opinions on every subject under the sun that they know nothing about. Not that he hasn't opinions—you can't tell from the shape of his head that he is a chap of original ideas and common sense and brilliance, even. When a young man like Bingley comes to call on Adora it does seem to me that she might bestir herself to make it a little more interesting. She might get up a party for him."

"How foolish you are, father!" cried his wife. "Get up a party, indeed, and have some little cat of another girl make eyes at Bingley the way these girls do. It isn't because Bingley comes of a good family and has wealth that I am glad to have him a friend of Adora's, but because I have always had the idea that there was lots more to him than it seemed on the surface. He is my ideal of a nice, sensible young man, and I have always said that when anybody like that came along I should never interpose the least objection to the affair."

"I don't know where he gets that candy, but it's great," conceded the younger brother. "Neckties don't matter so much. Maybe he'd give me a mine to manage, and I'd find a ton of gold on the side——"

"I wonder what Adora is doing," her mother interrupted, gathering up her work. "Just wasting time over a novel, I suppose. I'm going to tell her to telephone Bingley to come over—he doesn't know many people here, and the poor, dear boy must be lonesome!"

"I think my hearing must be going wrong," said the rich and slightly deaf aunt in some perplexity. "Why, you don't even sound like the same people who were talking five minutes ago!"

UNCOVER SCANDAL IN HIGH PLACES IN JAPAN TOO

Nobles Said to Have Been Made Rich During World War

TOKYO (By Mail).—Nippon has been annoyed a lot of late because some of her narikins and nobles have been naughty. The narikins are boys who got rich quick during the war. When it comes to spending and staging little parties with plenty of snap, some of 'em can make Broadway's best look like cheap skates. Then there are the gay young bloods with noble names and a marvelous eye for geisha. The two groups have been treating Tokyo to some rich and racy scandal. This the vernacular press faithfully plasters all over the front page, followed by long editorials bemoaning such scandalous tendencies and beseeching the whoop-'em-up bunch to return to the straight and narrow.

Also the yellow papers here have had rich pickings of late in a flock of divorce suits that constitute a sort of kimona and cherry-blossom version of the Stillman and similar affairs of the States.

This sort of thing is new in Japan. The papers have half their editorial writers busy pointing out that the great mass of the people haven't gone to the bow-wows. The papers are tremendously serious about it—editorially. But on the front page (which is their back page) the zippier the detail, the greater their glee. The sky's the limit.

Consider the case of Aki-ko, "The White Lotus," dubbed by the Japanese newspapers the "Queen of Chikusi." Aki-ko, one of the most popular Japanese poets and wife of an old and exceedingly wealthy noble, sued her husband for divorce not long ago, meanwhile trekking away to a fashionable resort with an impecunious young student who adored her poetry. One of the big newspapers put over a beat by getting the first interview with the White Lotus. Its principal rival retaliated with a few choice words from Friend Husband. They proceeded, in effect, to try the case in the newspapers. The one which first interviewed Aki-ko espoused her cause; the other, that of her husband. Each dug up new evidence every day. The people took up the argument. In one college the students held debates on the question: "Resolved, that the White Lotus is entirely justified in leaving her honorable lord." In another girl's college a class struck because, they said, their professor was an old fogey, and forbade them debating the momentous question.

Meanwhile Deserted Husband filed a libel suit for ten million yen against the newspaper supporting Aki-ko, and Aki-ko wrote a new book of poetry which sold like hot cakes.

The only bet that was overlooked was breaking into the movies, and, of course, that may come any day.

The temper of the teacher who was presiding over the drowsy class was approaching the end of its tether. The youngsters were so exasperating that their instructress trembled with righteous anger.

The lesson was about the history of machines. They had touched upon Edison and his voice producer. The boys, however, despite the lesson's interesting theme, were lethargic and lazy.

"Now, then," the teacher asked, impatiently, "from what was the first talking machine made?"

The class pricked up its ears. Here was a chance to shine. For two seconds forty minds sought for something brainy. Then a shuffling of feet at the back and a voice: "Please, miss, a rib!".

"The Line Is Busy"

When the telephone operator tells you "the line is busy," this fact has been made known to her by an electric signal. With the thousands of calls in daily telephone traffic, if the operator, to secure this information, were compelled to listen on the line of the party called, prompt service would be out of the question.

This delay is eliminated by an electric device which in the fraction of a second automatically indicates that the line called for is in use.

When "busy" reports are repeated on successive calls for the same number, it is generally due to an immoderate use of the called line. The length of a telephone conversation is obviously beyond the control of the telephone operator. Have confidence in her when she makes the report "the line is busy."

THE EVENING STORY

HIS HAT

(Copyright, 1921, by W. Werner)

Doris watched the figure of her husband as he went down the street. "I don't see why it is that Gerald has lost all interest in his appearance. It is bad enough the way he throws his things about the house, but I can pick them up. To go about looking so unkempt is bad for his position," she said.

"Well, pa never has anything new," defended his daughter. "His clothes are shabby."

"I know he doesn't have new clothes; none of us have spent much since we decided to pay down on that lot for our house, but that is no reason for not brushing his suit. I don't believe he has polished his shoes this whole week. I offered to press his trousers last night and he said he didn't care," replied Doris.

"Pa works too hard. He is tired out all the time and he helped me a lot with my algebra last night. I might have pressed his suit for him, but I didn't think."

"We are all too busy to stop to think"—even as she spoke Mrs. Lawrence was sprinkling the clothes to be ironed, while Jane washed up the breakfast dishes before leaving for school—"but I hate to see a man lose his pride."

The rain was falling in torrents when Gerald Lawrence got off the car at his corner. "There, Lawrence, I'll walk past your house so you can use my umbrella and not spoil your clothes."

The brusque tone had a kindly undercurrent beneath the quick speech, but Gerald, sensitively aware of his own unkempt appearance, chose to take offense. "I don't need any umbrella. My clothes couldn't be hurt any," he snapped, and walked from under the umbrella without even a word of thanks.

His acquaintance shrugged his shoulders and went toward his own home, which was in an opposite direction.

"Saves me two blocks walk in the wet," he thought. "Wonder where he got the grouch."

Gerald did not more than taste his dinner and sat hunched over in his chair in silence.

"Things go right at the office?" His wife had watched his lack of appetite with a growing apprehension.

"Fair enough. That young Sparks has a new suit. Tell you, if a fellow doesn't spend every cent he has on clothes he can't keep up with the rest. It is all one 'spend' from morning to night. I don't think the boss will ever give me a raise, and I don't care much." Apparently Gerald spent all his energy in his long speech for he hardly roused himself to say good night when Jane leaned over his chair at 10 o'clock to kiss him good night.

Mrs. Lawrence, tired out from a long day on her feet, fell asleep over her big basket of mending, and her daughter looked uneasily at her parents. To her youthful eyes the scene was immensely depressing. "Why don't they cheer up and do things," she thought. "Pa will never get a raise by going about like a thunder cloud and that mending could have gone awhile. Ma needn't work every minute."

The next morning Gerald's suit looked worse than ever, for he had not hung it up, and the dampness had wrinkled it badly. His tie needed pressing and his shoes were muddy.

"Surely," Mrs. Lawrence really snapped, for she had arisen blue and unrefreshed by a night of fitful slumber, "you are not going to work looking like that? Even your hair is not properly brushed. You didn't look like that when we were married, Gerald."

"The oatmeal tastes burnt," he replied dully. Then, as he caught the gleam in his wife's eyes, he retorted, "Doesn't look as though marriage had done much for me, does it?"

Jane choked over her piece of toast. Her parents seldom fussed, and she was dismayed over the gloomy faces at the table. "Guess it's up to me to do something," she told herself, trying to repress the mounting conviction that home was completely spoiled. "They seem to be trying to fight and be dissatisfied. After all, pa has a job, and we're not in debt." To the honest soul of the 15-year-old debt seemed the supreme evil, for they lived in a poor neighborhood where finances were freely discussed before the children.

"Gouge, Jane?" The pretty, intent eyes of the young teacher met the earnest brown gaze of her pupil.

"You know what I mean"—the words tumbled out excitedly—"that every one is against you. What do you do? Of course, no one would be against you when you wear such pretty clothes and you always smile."

The famous smile of the high school teacher came on duty instantly at the flattery, but Nadine thought ruefully of the stony-faced directors, who were adamant against even the widest smile when they were considering her application for a substantial raise in salary.

"What do I do when everything has gone wrong?" she repeated thoughtfully. "Why I go out and buy the prettiest hat I can afford."

Jane looked amazed. "But suppose you don't need it?"

"A woman always needs a new hat—that is if she can pay for it. Never go into debt." Nadine suddenly awoke to her position as example to the girls. "But a new hat gives one a pride in herself and in her clothes. You could not possibly come to school in muddy boots or a torn blouse with a new hat. The thing is inconceivable." The dimples that came into play at the end of the speech gave the impression of a joke, but Jane had caught the idea.

"Ma, where is that old hat dad wore last summer?" she demanded, bursting into the kitchen.

Her mother nodded toward a closet.

Jane had $5 she had saved toward Chritsmas, but she decided to sacrifice this toward the mental rehabilitation of her parents. She, however, said nothing of her intentions, but took the hat down to the store. After her parents had gone to bed a small figure might have been seen stealing into the family bedroom. A few minutes later Jane went into the kitchen with her arms filled with clothing. "If it cheers Miss Nadine it may cheer pa," she told herself rather dubiously.

When Mrs. Lawrence was setting the breakfast table she heard her husband calling. "I can't find my suit or shoes." His tone was neither cross nor surprised, merely dull.

Jane appeared in a crisp morning apron, with her dark eyes twinkling. "Dad, I pressed your suit last night." She held out the neatly pressed garments and her father, from his harbor behind the bedroom door, reached out and dazedly took them. "There is your tie washed and ironed, and——" She did not finish her sentence, but the tired face of the man colored furiously as she handed him a pair of beautifully polished shoes.

"Jane, I don't want you to ever touch my shoes again. What possessed you to do such a thing?" he asked.

"It's all right, dad. You see, I like you to look nice, the way you used to do before you got so tired." The pleasant young voice rang through the room as he slipped into the rejuvenated suit, and took special pains with the tie.

"I'll polish my shoes tonight before I go to bed." Gerald had taken time to shave, and looked years younger as he took his seat at the table. "This suit looks like new," he added, and ate a substintial breakfast.

"This isn't Christmas, but you needed it right now." Jane, looking slightly embarassed, held out a smart, brand new hat. "Does it fit?"

The mother and daughter watched the upright figure go jauntily down the street. "How did you ever think of such a thing, Jane? Men seem to be just like us. Something new to wear gives a pride in life. He ate more than he's eaten in weeks. And wasn't he pleased?" Mrs. Lawrence asked.

"He's always doing something for us, and he forgot himself. Pa is all right," and Jane flew away gayly to school.

Mrs. Lawrence surprised herself by humming as she finished her kitchen work. "Everything seems all right again now that Gerald has cheered up,' she thought serenely. "Who'd think that a hat and a pressed suit would accomplish so much?"

"I got my raise!" Gerald burst into the kitchen ten minutes ahead of time that evening. "Old Jacobs called me into the office and said he'd nearly decided to put that young Sparks over my head because I seemed so grouchy, but that because I had done such a splendid day's work and conciliated a customer who was about to transfer his account, he would give the job to me. Believe it was the new hat," he chuckled.

When Mr. Daniels went to the club he left Mrs. Daniels with a friend whose abilities as a scandal-monger and mischief-maker are pre-eminent. When he returned he poked his head into the drawing room and said, with a sigh of relief: "That old cat gone, I suppose?"

For an instant there was a dreadful silence, for as he uttered the last word he encountered the stony glare of the lady who had been in his mind. Then Mrs. Daniels spoke quite calmly: "The old cat?" she said, "Oh ,yes, dear; I sent it to the cats' home in a basket first thing this morning!"

Truths in Epigram

The best plan is, as the common proverb has it, to profit by the folly of others.—Pliny the Elder (23-79 A. D.).

What is not good for the swarm is not good for the bee.—Aurelius (121-180 A. D.).

A QUESTION OF AUTHORITY

Changes in railway fares are not being accepted with equanimity. Doubtless this is a matter to be adjudicated by due process.

In protest against some of the new schedules, the fact is pointed out that in instances more is charged for a single trip from point to point, than for two single trips covering the same distance and precisely the same trackage. It also is pointed out that this is in direct contravention of a state law.

The further peculiarity develops that the railroad commission has given the railroad permission to violate the law in question. This course is so unusual that it could not be allowed to stand unquestioned without being sustained by some authority that has not yet been revealed.

The general understanding is, that a law duly passed, is not to be waived at the option of any official or official body. If it is necessary to abrogate a statute, some formality of procedure is understood to be essential as a preliminary. This procedure may lead to repeal, or to pronouncement that the law is unconstitutional.

That owing to some exigency, or to some demand of convenience, the railroad commission is empowered to point to any certain law, and remark "That doesn't count" certainly is introduction of a novelty.

THE GOLDEN RULE

There is a clothing manufacturer in Cincinnati who employs a thousand men and women. His factory is conducted by the Golden Rule. He finds that this pays; pays in happiness which he shares with the workers; pays in actual dividends.

Recently a visitor went through the factory. He found everybody doing his or her part apparently at top speed. The proprietor was showing him through. "These are piece-workers, of course," the visitor remarked. They were not, however. They were paid a weekly wage.

The visitor reached the floor where the cutting of garments was in progress. Here the operatives were moving with greater deliberation. "Well, these men are paid by the week I am sure," said the visitor. "No," answered the proprietor, "these are the only piece-workers in the whole establishment. They understand that accuracy is necessary."

With the beginning of the year the wages of all were raised 10 per cent. The employer took the step voluntarily. He explained to his force that they had earned the consideration. To their loyalty he ascribed the abounding prosperity that had come to him, and he was sharing it, as he said was just.

In addition to the advance in pay, he gave the employees Saturday of every week as a vacation. He did this because many of them were married women, and it was but fair he thought, that they should be permitted to be with their children when the youngsters could not be at school.

The 10 per cent raise is an actual increase of the weekly income. It is not figured as being expressed in the day less of toil. He has instituted a five-week day, and for this pays 10 per cent more than paid formerly to his contented employees for a six-week day.

Mr. Nash, the proprietor in question, had been asked one day to deliver an address from the pulpit of a Cincinnati church. In an earlier time he had been a minister, but his views did not coincide with orthodoxy, so as he expressed it "they derailed me." Later he had been a carpenter, hod carrier, lather and day laborer. And he thought he had become an atheist. In preparing to make the address he turned to the New Testament. As he tells it himself:

"Everywhere I found the Nazarene stressing the gospel of social and economic righteousness. Constantly he was harking back to that precept we call the Golden Rule—which I had always looked upon as a piece of impractical idealism. So I got to wondering if most of us hadn't wandered far afield—if the Golden Rule wasn't really meant to live by and work by."

And he works by it. He has won to great success. He finds joy in fellowship. He adopted the Golden Rule in his little shop, and in his great factory with its immense output, is seen the result. The same principle governs still.

In the simple history of this fine business career is precept and example combined.

NEWSPAPER DIPLOMACY

"The Hearst newspapers have constantly insisted that these diplomats gathered in Washington were all professional liars, unable to speak or to deal honestly, and only there in the hope of being able to cheat our simple-minded amateur negotiators."

So writes Philip Francis. Strangely enough, he is not attempting to disparage the papers in question, by his damning words. On the contrary, by one of the strange quirks that get into the brains of a Hearstling, he deems himself to be bestowing praise. It is a note of jubilation that he is striking. He proclaims the shameful course, in manifesting which he has been active, in just the mood that he would place a wreath of laurel on the brow of his master.

Elihu Root, one of the great constitutional lawyers of the world, his services sought in grave crises by the nations of Europe; a very genius for clear thinking, an unquestioned patriot, is characterized as a "simple-minded amateur."

Charles Evans Hughes, who astounded the conference by the boldness of his initial proposition, and who has been a dominating force in the proceedings; a man who sat with credit on the supreme bench; a lawyer of unquestioned acumen and tremendous practice, also set down as a "simple minded amateur negotiator."

And high-minded representatives of European peoples, here at the invitation of the United States, earnest in their endeavors to carry out the principles that inspired the call to the gathering, termed "professional liars, unable to speak or to deal honestly!"

It is believed that Francis, imbued with the spirit of the concern employing him, not only has reached the limit of journalistic indecency, but is swollen with pride as he calls attention to his grimaces and postures.

GREAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE

Lloyd George has drawn up the written pledge of Great Britain to go to the aid of France in case of unprovoked aggression on the part of Germany. The promise includes the employment of England's full military and naval strength if necessary.

This is an important and illuminating agreement. In every way it tends to promotion of peace. If there is any danger to France from Germany, the menace is banished. It is difficult to see that such menace exists, but France was assured in its own mind that Germany was a threat.

Provided that there is in Germany a spirit that might have inspired Germany to attack France, it could not be so suicidally inclined as to make an attack that would on the instant be directed also against England. Germany has had one military lesson.

Another favorable effect of the pledge will be to silence the insolent mischief makers who have been determined to create friction between France and England, and who would not be content with any theory that did not set these nations at one another's throats.

Perhaps even these mischief makers understand how silly their spoutings seem now. This circumstance may have no relation to world peace, but it promises much for world comfort.

There continues hope that Ireland is to escape civil war. Such an outcome as civil war would be a sorry climax to the years of endeavor to found an Irish free state.

The loser in a dice game in Los Angeles shot the winner through the heart, took the stakes and walked away. At this writing he seems still to be walking. Unfortunately for him, should he be caught, the sum of which he possessed himself in defiance of all rules of the game, would be insufficient to enlist the sympathies of a criminal lawyer.

Attempts to gag the press are receiving satisfactory, and somewhat unexpected support in the senate. The busy professional reformer had so easy a time in getting his own way in the house, that he had regarded himself secure in the position of censor. He looked forward with much pleasure to the task of telling the newspapers of the land what they might print.

It is said that a man who started from Los Angeles to San Francisco by automobile carried $10,000 on his person. The time for his arrival has long passed, and nothing has been neard from him. Any observant citizen knows that the highways are not so safe as they should be. A man carrying a fortune in money would be regarded as a tempting prize by thugs of the road.

Apparently the charge that prohibition officials connived at tilting of the New Year lid, has failed to stick. At least the officials in question continue to stick.

WHAT IT MEANS TO BE ALIVE

By DR. FRANK CRANE

The simplest things in the world are the most marvelous.

A common leaf from an apple tree, under the microscope, becomes an amazing tissue of cell and filament.

We sometimes complain that our life is commonplace, humdrum and boresome. People sometimes get so sick of it that they throw their life away.

The simplest and most primary of our possessions is life. It is simple; it is elemental; it is common. And yet, so is the sun, so is love, so is God. These simplest things are abysmal mysteries.

So, if you have life, think what life is. Look at its history from the day we first entered upon our planet.

Consider life in its struggle upward through all the battlefields of evolution, from the lowest protozoa to the mind of Shakespeare.

At every step its existence has been threatened, yet every time it has triumphed.

The name of life is The Great Overcomer.

When it was threatened with drowning in the waters it developed gills with which to breathe water, and fins with which to walk through it. When it was in danger of being crushed it put on a shell, as the tortoise or the snail.

At each new conspiracy against it, it found a defense.

Now, long teeth, and sharp claws, and, again, a thick hide, or horns, or a sting, or poisonous fangs.

At last, it reached the top of the ladder—humanity—and there its pulses beat as strong and sure as they beat ten thousand years ago in the primitive animal.

If you are alive you have that inestimable gift. You are a fragment of that greatest and most conquering of all forces.

What a thing it is to have the inheritance of life!

And, after all, our business is to live. Just to express ourselves, just to be, just to feel that common current of power that thrills through the universe and is its master—Life. Let nothing make you despise Life.

The greatest Teacher said: 'I have come that ye might have life."

Life is the fundamental morality, for it is the protest against every perversion that would undo us.

To live, if we but realize what life is, is to triumph.

THE LISTENING POST

Once there was an egotist.
A lamentable thing to be sure.
In the ordinary acceptance of the term the egotist feels that the world is greatly dependent upon him.
His perspective is bad.

* * *

The world has need of all the useful men and women in it.
The world needs them.
But they need the world as well.
None of us is independent.
We are all interdependent.

* * *

Suppose all the shoemakers went out of business at once.
Or the farmers.
Or the butchers and bakers.
Or any other of the great classes that supply us with necessaries.
What would become of the egotists?

* * *

If the cook quit the chances are the egotist would not be able to get his breakfast.
Think of an egotist who would starve to death if all the cooks quit!
And claiming to be of unusual importance in the world!

* * *

But the egotist strode forth one fine morning.
Full of egotism.
Claiming the world to be his oyster.
That he would open and swallow at his pleasure.
And his stride was along a walk where a small boy had been.
With a banana.

* * *

And the peel of the banana lay upon the walk.
Banana peels do not like egotists anyway.
And this one had an especial aversion.
And it said as the egotist approached:
"Watch me! I'll show him!"
And the egotist, full of egotism, planted one foot squarely upon the banana peel.

* * *

And then and there egotism went down.
Sprawled and flattened out.
Majesty overthrown by a banana peel!
Horrible thought!
And a small boy stood in the distance and laughed.
Small boys are no respecters of egotists.

* * *

And when the egotist had arisen and brushed off the dust and readjusted his halo, the wind came.
A fresh breeze.
And spied the egotist.
And whistled:
"Watch me! I'll show him!"
And lifted the egotist's straw hat and sent it whirling and flying away.
And the egotist chased it.
Think of majesty chasing a straw hat!

* * *

And as the egotist chased his straw hat, a brick in a coping spied him.
And bricks do not like egotists either.
And they lend themselves readily to be thrown at them.
"Watch me!" said the brick. "I'll show him!"
And so the brick loosened itself from the wall and fell.
And hit the egotist on the head.

* * *

And again majesty succumbed.
To petty mischance.
And a germ was hanging about.
And they do not like egotists either.
And he lighted in the injury made by the brick.
"Watch me!" said the germ. "I'll show him!"

* * *

And the germ sent invitations to members of the family.
With the usual result.
And the egotist went the way of all flesh.
Which is all egotism is anyway—flesh.

* * *

And a sexton stood with his spade.
And filled a hole in the ground.
"Watch me!" said the sexton. "I'll show him!"
And when he had the hole filled he patted the mound with the spade.

SONGS OF THE POETS

The Evening Cloud—By John Wilson (1785-1854)

A cloud lay cradled near the setting sun,
A gleam of crimson tinged its braided snow;
Long had I watched the glory moving on
O'er the still radiance of the lake below.
Tranquil its spirit seemed, and floated slow!
Even in its very motion there was rest;
While every breath of eve that chanced to blow
Wafted the traveler to the beauteous west.
Emblem, methought, of the departed soul!
To whose white robe the gleam of bliss is given,
And by the breath of mercy made to roll
Right onwards to the golden gates of heaven,
Where to the eye of faith it peaceful lies,
And tells to man his glorious destinies.

EASTERN POINT OF VIEW

BORAH BOWS TO LENINE

[Philadelphia Ledger]

In what has become his general break with the political party to which he nominally belongs, Senator Borah again has wandered off the administration reservation. It is Russia this time. The senator from Idaho, elbow to elbow with the senator from Maryland and the senator from Wisconsin, now adds the "Lenine bloc" to the map of the senate.

The man from Idaho wants soviet Russia recognized. He would welcome the duumvirs of Moscow as two honest and much-maligned men, and in a burst of acclamation places upon the brow of Lenine this chaplet:

"I make the assertion that his is one of the two or three great intellects produced by the world war."

He is referring to the intellect, of course, that has set Russia back into welter of barbarism and darkened her skies with the shadows of a second dark age. It is this same intellect that so marvelously has advanced the good of the Russians through bringing starvation and famine pangs to approximately 20,000,000 souls, turning her great cities into decaying and abandoned communities, jamming her prisons full of the best brains in Russia and keeping his butchers of the Red Chekha busy twelve months in the year.

The blood, starvation and terror that came into Russia with Lenine and Trotzky were all kept discreetly in the far background by soviet Russia's new defender. He masked and screened them in a flow of great, mellifluous and high-sounding words. In his opinion, the bolshevist government is a better and kindlier government than that of the late and not always lamented czar. That is a matter of opinion, a choice between two evil things; but the senator's choice illuminates his mind as with a great light. The obvious reply to one of his most impassioned questions is that if there "was ever a government that was more inhumane and bloody than that of the czar," it is this same red-handed and autocratic soviet gang.

In throbbing sentences the Idahoan reminds the world of Russian sacrifices that were many and terrible. The allied world has given full tribute to the old Russian armies. They sleep from the Baltic to the beechwoods of Bukowina, and the spirit of the old, faith-keeping Russia sleeps with them. Mr. Borah failed to remind us, however, that it was later Russian treachery that came near dooming the allies in 1917-18, and had not America taken the recreant Russians' place the senator might have been under the necessity of learning to speak German.

We have not treated the Russian people as "our deadly enemies." When the Russian people went mad we were forced, in self-defence and for self-preservation, to keep away from them and to keep them away from us. They announced themselves as the deadly enemies of civilization, of order, of law and of that society that keeps a coat on the back of the man from Idaho and keeps him from being one in some such army of the starving as that now dying along the Volga.

When the madness passes, as it is passing, we can let down the barriers that are up. The soviets' red is fading. It may be that some day we shall recognize a soviet regime, but it will not be the red original. In the meantime, we prefer to stand with Hoover, Hughes and Harding rather than with La Follette, Borah, France, Eugene V. Debs and Max Eastman.

JUST BETWEEN OURSELVES

By DELLA STEWART

How we can deceive ourselves! And how we love to do it! A bit unconsciously, it may be, such a habit has it become with us. Just as we need no thought to accomplish any of the thousand and one little necessary details of everyday life, so we cultivate false ideas. We'd feel really angry were it suggested to us that we were so doing.

There are certain surroundings that we "must" put up with. We spend more nervous force trying to become reconciled to them than we would in changing them. There are certain habits that limit our health. We cannot break them—so we say. But what's the reason Lack of determination and will power? Everybody has more or less of these, though they may be latent and unused. Indeed, they grow by the using. We're deceiving ourselves.

We "just love" this or that, but alas! "We can't find time for it." Seldom are these two statements, taken together, the truth. We either do not "love" as much as we are posing to, or we would "find time." We don't find time, because we fail to hunt for it. If we did, we might find it hidden away in superfluous efforts, in unessential meanderings.

We can't afford this convenience, this work-saver. That may be possible, but is not always the fact. We cannot afford it, because we want other less necessary but more showy articles. We wish for certain friendships and think them beyond our reach. If we were willing to exert ourselves to be worthy of them they would come to us.

We need to look out for self-deceit. There's no logical place for it in life.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

Some papers have won contempt by the manner in which they have catered to Mrs. Obenchain. The woman has been given as much publicity as though brought into notice first, by worthy achievement entitling her to fame.

From the interviews with her, the eagerness to learn her opinion, which is valueless when learned; the description of her charm, she might have been a heroine, instead of a woman confined in jail on the charge of murder. There is a frank indecency in the manner and pertinacity of exploiting her.

The woman is entitled to fair trial, nothing more. This includes of course, the "presumption of innocence." Such presumption perhaps is the only one to which the public is legally bound to offer respect. Often it is a mere figment of the law.

Incidental to another murder trial, with which the Obenchain woman is associated by definite personal interest, much light has been thrown on the conduct and character of the prisoner. The glare does not cause her to stand forth clearly as a model of the virtues. On the contrary, the impression given is distinctly hurtful to her.

Therefore the editorial instinct to make capital of her, to write reams of flabby nonsense about her, causes a reaction that must create prejudice against her case. Thus she is not being treated fairly. Her sob sisters (he and she), of the press, are wronging her. Why can't they let her alone? They should do this, if not for her sake, then because the public needs a rest.

Wood alcohol has just been fatal to five men in Hoboken. An element of justice seems to have marked the affair, since the saloonkeeper who dispensed the stuff was of the number its kick sent hence.

Wood alcohol is deadly as a beverage. Apparently the only way for some people to find this out is to be killed by it.

When the United States health service sent out word that good teeth are essential to health, it was not telling anything particularly new.

It might have added that another necessary factor is nutriment of a proper sort for the teeth to bite. Nature affords the teeth, but to procure the nutriment, requires hustling.

Senator (perhaps)-elect Newberry has confided to the gentlemen who must pass on the question of seating him, all about the dreadful activity of his friends.

If these friends took advantage of an unsuspecting aspirant, and while he was engaged in legal and patriotic endeavor to win out, expended vast sums, resulting in his triumph, but a shock to his moral system, what could he do about it?

True, he might have refused to accept a purchased seat, but in this country many things are guided by precedent. He could find no precedent.

Mr. Newberry is entitled to sympathy. It must be very disconcerting that trusted friends have given him a cross of gold to bear.

In instructions to Southern Pacific employees about how to eat on a scientific plan, there is this paragraph of advice:

"Don't eat a big meal for breakfast and a sandwich for luncheon. Reverse it."

People become educated along certain lines by the mere circumstance of being on earth. If a man old enough and strong enough to work for a living doesn't know what manner of eating, including the food and the time to take it, agrees with him, his mentality is low.

The man employed in an office, if partaking of a light breakfast, by noon would be so hungry as to be tempted to over-eat. He is allowed a short interval for swallowing food, perhaps even for mastication, but none for digestion. He resumes his work heavy and dull and incompetent.

On the contrary, by absorbing a square breakfast, he has the hour or so that it takes him to get to his office, for digestion to get well started. He is sustained until dinner time then, if he takes but the lightest lunch, or no lunch.

People who have found that going without breakfast suits them are very welcome to go without. It is quite possible that the regimen so pleasing to them, would wreck the health and happiness of one differently constituted.

The really scientific way to eat, is to eat wholesome food at regular intervals, and be grateful for the chance to get it.

WATCHING THE PARADE

By JOHN PILGRIM

This morning "General" Jacob S. Coxey came into the office. You know "General" Jake. If you do not you ought to. He is the man who invented Coxey's Army away back in our national middle ages and led his protest in boots across country to Washington. He has advocated various financial ideas that seem heretical and barbarous to bankers' eyes. He has never, so far as I know, succeeded in getting any one of his ideas embalmed in statutory form, but he has never quit.

"The more opposition I have the harder it makes me work," said "General" Jake.

A foxy old gentleman is the "general." Most people who incur the dislike, not to say the spiteful displeasure, of the fiduciary bosses forget to do anything else. They go around calling bankers names and handing out pamphlets and making talks about the currency on the briefest provocation. Sooner or later they forget to put on clean collar and shave, and they wear overcoats instead of vests in the summer time. Then the bankers say of them:

"Poor old cranks! Pitiful, isn't it?"

And because they look like cranks and dress like cranks and let down their back hair the rest of us think they are cranks. Whereas Coxey has taken enough time off from his job of reforming our currency system to keep a very satisfactory business going out west somewhere. It is hard to say that a man is a crank who has not merely a visible but a lavish means of support. If the charge is brought it is hard to make it stick. A rich man may be eccentric but he is never a crank.

Coxey says the most fun this world holds is in fighting for something you believe to be right. But he also believes in keeping the fight centered on the main issue and in avoiding getting licked by ricochet. He says that a reading of Scriptural history shows that St. John played a most important part, but that the average young person only remembers that part of St. John's history which discloses the Forerunner as living on locusts and wild honey. That, he says, leaves an unpleasant impression. One forgets what was St. John's real lifework in thinking of the locusts.

DO YOU KNOW THAT?

FIRST LUTHERAN HAS BIG GROWTH

Dr. Funk Brings People Into Little Church Around Corner

The annual congregational meeting of the First Lutheran church was held Wednesday evening. Special interest was shown by the large attendance, this being the first anniversary of the present pastorate. The reports from all departments of the church indicated that most commendable progress had been made. All bills have been met properly, and a neat sum remains on hand in each treasury.

The pastor, Dr. Funk, reported that 77 members had been added to the church since he had taken charge of the work, 23 of that number being received last Sunday. Dr. Funk commended the congregation's loyalty and zeal in the Master's cause in an address on Act 2:1, "They were all with one accord in one place." He said: "That is practically the way we have come together here tonight." He has introduced the common service in the worship of the church. He also organized a Luther League that has made such progress that it takes full charge of the evening service one Sunday in each month.

The Young People's Bible class reported $43 in its treasury, and the Ladies' Aid society reported a balance of $144. The enthusiasm of the meeting reached its climax, however, when a motion to adopt the use of the robe in the regular services was passed by unanimous vote.

Dr. Funk is a preacher of the positive type, and his attitude is that of an earnest, conscientious Christian, seeking only that which is for the soul's welfare. His delivery is forceful and convincing, winning the hearts of his hearers to the cause he represents.

Garibaldi's Descendant Who Was Mrs. Harding's Visitor at White House

Signorina Italia Anita Garibaldi, daughter of Ricciotti Garibaldi, the only surviving son of the celebrated Italian patriot was received recently at the White House by Mrs. Harding. This photograph of Signorina Garibaldi was made in Washington after she had visited the President's wife.

Compositors are supposed to be able to decipher all kinds of handwriting. On this point Robert Clark ,the Edinburgh printer, used to tell a story. Professor Lindsay Alexander came in to his office one Friday with the manuscript of a sermon. "You must let me have proofs of this tomorrow," he said. Mr. Clark told him the time was too short. He must give them a few days longer.

"No," he said; "I must preach this sermon tomorrow. It is a special sermon. I wrote it ten years ago, and now I can't make out a word of it."

AMUNDSEN TO HUNT WEATHER

Explorer to Find Origin of Storms in Polar Regions

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—Captain Raold Amundsen is going to the top of the world to see how the weather is made. Amundsen, who discovered the South pole, will soon start on a 5-year drift of exploration in the Arctic circle from Alaska to Norway. Among other things he hopes to learn the methods of the Polar "still" where the weather comes from, he said in an interview given the United Press. He may obtain scientific data which will make it possible to forecast all storms far in advance.

"It is," he said, "the theory of Prof. Bjerkness of Christiania, that storms originate over the North polar regions."

A man and his wife were invited to a reception given by a certain viceroy of India, received, by mistake, tickets of different colors, one white, one blue.

They didn't know it, but the viceroy had decided to make some distinction between his personal guests and those who were not quite so intimate. Accordingly, blue and white tickets were sent out. The "whites" were to enter a certain door, which gave them precedence over the "blues," who were to gain admittance by another entrance.

When the man and his wife arrivd at the "white" entrance, the A. D. C. on duty told them they could not enter together, for the lady, having a blue ticket, must present herself at the other door.

The wife, says Mr. Frederic Villiers in his book, "Five Decades of Adventure," refused to be separated from her husband by such an absurd regulation and, fixing the young official with a stony glare, said: "Young man, my husband and I are not a Seidlitz powder!"

TWILIGHT CONCERTS FOR THE HOLY FAMILY ORGAN FUND

Parishoners of the Holy Family Catholic church and the music loving public generally look forward now to the first of a series of twilight subscription recitals arranged by Harry Girard and to be given at the Glendale theater, the first of which will be given Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock for the benefit of the organ fund of the church.

This fund, which was started with a big cash subscription by Mr. Girard was originally for a $5,000 instrument but with the completion of the fine new church it was realized that the best is none too good. A decision has therefore been made to secure the best instrument to be had on this coast and a more expensive organ which will have every accessory and attachment that has ever been employed to amplify the capacity of this instrument which is equivalent to an orchestra. The church is therefore to possess what will probably be the finest church organ in this portion of Southern California.

In the service which Mr. Girard volunteered, he will have the backing of members of the Glendale Council of Knights of Columbus, the Holy Name society, and the local Young Ladies' Institute, besides a long list of outside patrons and patronesses.

Members of the bodies mentioned have been organized into committees as follows: Honorary Finance—Peter L. Ferry, chairman; George McLoughlin, Jack Monahan, Michael Brennan and Timothy Keleher. Press committee—Lee McMahon, Maurice Healy, Joseph E. Keeley, J. W. Andree. Printing committee—Frank P. Dunn, Edward R. Lucy, Joseph Folz.

The program will be varied in character, the instrumental and vocal numbers being interspersed with a few readings and recitations.

BIG VAUDEVILLE HITS TONIGHT

Royal Pina Troupe at T. D. & L. Theater Tonight

Vaudeville in the true sense of the word is coming to the T. D. and L. theater for this week-end. Meiklejohn and Dunn have arranged a bill for today and Saturday that is made up of acts that have one hundred percent entertainment value.

The Royal Pina Troupe of whirlwind acrobats and tumblers perform some marvelous feats of balancing and foot juggling that really are astounding. Many of the stunts which they perform have never been seen in this country before as this act comes direct to the coast from Spain.

Don Fiatti, the king of accordeonists has a repertoire that contains everything from the latest of jazz selections to the best of operatic airs. When it comes to getting music out of the accordeon, Don Fiatti is certainly a wizard at this instrument.

Those dare-devils on wheels, Time and Ward, have a breath-taking act that furnishes many thrills and moments of suspense. These cyclists risk their lives with the utmost abandon, in fact they seem to derive pleasure from it for there are many smiles in their act.

On the screen, Jack Holt will be shown in his first starring vehicle, "The Call of the North." This is a drama of the frozen Alaskan country. The lure of the north is finely treated in this picture and every scene has a thrill of its own.

A man who had obtained work in a railroad yard was told off to mark some freight cars.

"Here's a piece of chalk," said the foreman. "Mark each of 'em eleven."

A little later the foreman came round again. There was a large "1" on the first car. Nothing else had been done.

"What does this mean?" asked the foreman. "Only one truck done—and I said eleven, not one."

"I know," said the man, "but I couldn't think which side of the '1' the other '1' goes.

Six - Year - Old Traveled Through Places Never Visited by White Folk

Norma Snow, six-year-old daughter of W. A. Snow, of San Francisco, California, who just returned from a two-year trip with her daddy and mother to places never before visited by white people. The expedition covered about 80,000 miles in the very wildest country. The youngster is just as healthy and happy as though she had spent the two years in luxurious civilization. She was the only passenger aboard the S. S. Olympic who hung up a stocking Christmas eve. The little girl was not disappointed, for she found a big doll tucked away in her stocking.

PA AND THE BOY

"Willie, your master's report of your work is very bad. Do you know that when Warren G. Harding was your age he was head of the school?"

"Yes, pa; and when he was your age he was President of the United States."

COST OF LIVING SHOWS SOME DROP

Fourteen Per Cent Reduction in Sixteen Cities of Nation

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—The retail cost of food in 16 cities of the United States during the fiscal year ending December 15, 1921, shows a decrease of approximately 14 per cent over the preceding year.

Mobile and Savanah, with an 18 per cent decrease, tops the list. Salt Lake City during this period showed a decrease of 17 per cent and Omaha 15 per cent.

During the period from November 15 to December 15, 1921, there was a decrease in 12 of these cities, and an increase in two. Indianapolis and Salt Lake City showed the largest decrease with 3 per cent. In Omaha, a decrease of 1 per cent was shown.

Compared with the average retail cost of food in 1913 the retail cost of food on December 1, 1921, still was 47 per cent higher in Omaha and 23 per cent in Salt Lake City.

Herbert A. Giles gives the following example of Chinese humor in his "History of Chinese Literature." "A man who had been condemned to wear a wooden collar was seen by some of his friends. 'What have you been doing,' they asked him, 'to deserve this?' 'Oh, nothing,' he replied; 'I only picked up an old piece of rope.' 'And you are to be punished thus severely,' they said, 'for merely picking up an end of rope?' 'Well,' answered the man, 'the fact is that there was bullock tied to the other end.'"

A SONG ON MILO WHEAT by T. W. McConnell

You ask me, friends; why really, now,
I haven't much to say;
But I am sure that Milo Wheat
Is for the best today.
Now, some things let me speak about
That you may plainly see
When folks once taste of MILO WHEAT
You'll need no other plea.
For folks who eat this food,
I'm sure you will hear say:
"For strength, health and every ill,
It's best, we know today;
We're living now on MILO WHEAT,
Our bank account will grow,
For we can have a good square meal
For three cents now, you know.
You know our days are perilous times
When all will have a test,
And they will surely want to eat
The cheapest and the best.
It will not be so very long
Till you will hear the call
For MILO WHEAT from every class,
Both rich, poor, large and small.

NEWBERRY CASE TO BE BIG ISSUE IN FALL CAMPAIGN

Democrats See Opportunity to Regain Control of Senate

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—Senator Truman H. Newberry, Michigan, given his seat in the senate by a vote of 46 to 41, today declared he would not now resign. Reports have been current that the senator would retire if vindicated by the senate of charges of personal knowledge of the excessive use of money in his campaign against Henry Ford.

The Newberry case today is a political campaign issue. So far as the present senate is concerned the case was settled last night when, on four roll calls, each resulting 46 to 41, Republican leaders repelled all assaults on Senator Newberry's title to his seat.

That record will be carried into the senatorial primaries and the general elections in every state which nominates and elects a senator this year. The Democrats count on the Newberry case to win them control of the senate.

So far as the senate record is concerned, Newberry now is fully entitled to his seat, though his colleagues condemned the excessive use of money in political campaigns.

The "uncertain" group of Republican senators decided the issue.

McNary, Oregon, who, it is said, was "clubbed" into voting for Newberry by administration threats to block his reclamation bill; Poindexter, Washington; Willis, Ohio; Cummins, Iowa; Kellogg, Minnesota—these provided the votes to seat Newberry.

Nine Republicans, Borah, Capper, LaFollette, Norris, Norbeck, Kenyon, Jones, Washington, and Sutherland, voted against Newberry.

After five-year-old Robert had gone to bed on Christmas Eve his mother went into the room to see whether he had hung up his stockings properly for Santa Claus. Much to her surprise she found that the little fellow had appropriated one of hers for the occasion, and had attached a slip of paper on which he had printed in a bold hand one of the Sunday school texts: "The Lord Loveth a Chearfull Givur."

The number of employees affected by wage disputes in Pennsylvania during 1920 was 88,988, of which number 7041 were females.

Foley's Friendly Fancies

I MET THE FAIRY GLADNESS

I met the Fairy Gladness as she tripped along her way,
And the smile of her was sweeter than the mornings are in May;
The voice of her was music as the songs of birds may be,
And I said: "Pray, Fairy Gladness, won't you come and walk with me?
For the heart of me is merry and I know not any care,
And you shall be my comrade and the two of us shall fare
Far away across the meadows where the world is at its May—"
I met the Fairy Gladness as she tripped upon her way.

I met the Fairy Gladness with a garland on her head,
And the eyes of her were dancing and her cheeks were rosy red,
And she had with her a basket filled with roses that were sweet,
As she tripped along the pathway with her little sandaled feet.
"Oh, where may you be going, pray, and won't you walk with me?"
"I'm sorry, Gallant Sir," she said, "indeed it may not be,
For I'm off to bear my basket full of roses to the town
Where's a little House of Sorrow and the dreams are tumble-down!"

"Now I humbly ask your pardon and I beg you will believe
That I knew not in my gladness there were any who might grieve;
Won't you let me bear your basket with the roses in, I pray,
And let me serve you humbly as you go upon your way?"
"Indeed, I shall be happy, Sir, and you shall walk with me, Until we find the Place of Tears, wherever that may be!"
So we two set out together and we went the way to town,
To the Little House of Sorrow where the dreams were tumble-down!

Fitting French Shoes To Fleet of Americans

By HEDDA HOYT of The United Press

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—Women who hoped that the French shoes which came to America with the first little war-brides would last longer are peeved to find instead a longer last. Shoe dealers declare that it is the length of the American women's toes which necessitates the longer vamp.

For many years women of Latin countries, such as Cuba, Spain and France, have been wearing short, snubbed-toed shoes. The underlying reason for this being the short, chubby feet of the average Latin.

The long, flat walking boot of the Bostonian type so popular in England and America would seem ridiculous on a shawl-draped Spanish beauty. Although every American woman who toddles about in the short vamped boot knew that though the boot pinched it was a thing of beauty. American boot makers, who are the finest in the world, have come to the front with a modified French vamp which gives the appearance of being short and has all the chic of the French boot, but adds the additional length necessary to comfort.

These are made in various materials. For afternoon wear the most prevalent type is made of patent leather with an instep strap. Some of them have pipings of red or green leather and have heels of red or green. Others are made to slip on over the foot as a Russian boot does. The evening slippers are especially beautiful, made in silver and gold brocade with tiny cross straps held in place by rhinestone buckles.

The woman who prefers to wear the low pump instead of the high shoe for winter months will be able to purchase a spat that is long enough to reach the hem of the shortest skirt. They come in the eighteen button length and are made in satin and in felt, with an elastic band at the top to accommodate the stout woman as well as the svelt.

Ankle straps are no longer being used for street wear and only occasionally for dress wear.

Sheer gauze has replaced the silk net mesh hosiery.

Long earrings which are constantly gaining in popularity here are worn with the bobbed head dresses as well as with the most fastidious chignons.

How greatly the simple little kerchiefs of colored linen add to the smartness of a costume. These can be purchased in at least a dozen colors and are easy to make if one is handy with the needle.

Monkey fur continues to hold its own as a trimming. This season we find it combined with sapphire blue and persimmon red, as well as with black. The fur itself is being made in different shades: Taupe, brown, grey and a mixture of black and white being the most popular.

Long gloves are no longer considered necessary for the most formal affairs such as balls and operas. The smartly gowned women seldom appear in them this year, but often the upper arm is bedecked with as many as a dozen bracelets.

Two men were sentenced by a self-appointed court to be hanged for horse stealing. The place selected for the execution was the middle of a bridge spanning a river.

The first knot was tied insecurely and the prisoner dropped into the river, swam ashore and escaped.

As the second rope was being adjusted the remaining culprit drawled out: "Say, fellows, make sure o' the knot this time. I can't swim."

SECURING FUNDS CITY HOSPITAL

Mrs. Allender Here for Crippled Children's Welfare

Glendale is being canvassed by Mrs. N. W. Allender on behalf of the California home for crippled children in Los Angeles, known as the Orthopaedic hospital. Mr. Loughlin, who was one of the speakers before the Tuesday Afternoon club December 6, when Sheriff Traeger, County Supervisor Bean and W. O. Martin told of county institutions, had considerable to say of this hospital and of the great need for its enlargement.

At the present time, he said, it is treating daily 50 children and has a waiting list of 400. To help provide funds for this enlargement, the house to house canvass is being made by Mrs. Allender, who carries with her letters of indorsement signed by Mayor Spencer Robinson, Mrs. John Robert White, president of the Parent-Teacher federation; Mrs. Charles H. Toll, president of the Los Angeles Ebell club; Herman Nelson and Mrs. E. V. Bacon. It is hoped that the public will respond generously to Mrs. Allender's appeal for this most worthy charity.

EDITORIALS

By the People

Editor Glendale Press: Godly love, is our ideal; in it is victory. God so loved the world, that he gave His best to save it. (Jn. 3, 16). And, if we have this Godly love in us, we will live it out, regardless of class, color or creed. In Rom. Ch. 2, we see that if brother berates brother, or one creed or cult, another one, they are void of Divine love He that loveth not, knoweth not God, for God is Love. I John 4, 8, 16. And this is the Love of God, that we keep His commandments. (Ch. 5, 2, 3). And to prove that we love God, we must obey Him, as Jesus did. John 15, 10. Jesus said that He came not to condemn the world, but to save it; and He joined no man-made creed or cult, of any kind.

Christians, follow Jesus, and their names are written in heaven.

And, as for God's great and "sure test," we see in Ex. 16 that He used His holy 7th day (made at creation) with which to prove Israel, to see if they would obey any of His laws or not. And God used this "sure test" forty years. See Heb. 3, 7, to 4, 13.

So, the fourth commandment is surely the Word of God's patience, referred to in Rev. 3, 10, and is to be "the test" of the whole world and to end in the war of Armageddon (Rev 16:14-16), a war against the Lamb (Rec. 17:14), now developing through the church federation with their Sunday laws, etc.

In the Spirit we see that the foundation stone laid in Zion (Isa. 28, 16) is God's holy seventh day, because as making a holy rest day, at creation, was the first thing God did for man's spiritual good; it was and is the foundation stone on which rests the plant of our salvation, sanctification (Ex. 31, 13) and redemption; hence, also, the church. And it is to be kept in the new earth (Isa. 66, 22, 23).

Calling the first day (Sunday) "the Sabbath," or the "Lord's day" is absurd, and has no foundation. Any theory, teaching disobedience to any of God's rock-written law, is poison to the soul. Jesus said that He is "Lord of the Sabbath." And who art thou, oh man, that replieth against God.

If Satan can get us to use human reasoning as he did Eve (Gen. 3, 1-6) then he has us, for it is the tares that choke out "the Word of God." So, if we use our God-given ability to reason away any part of God's holy rock-written law, we surely spoil our prospects of Eternal Life. (Jas. 2-10).

All in Godly Love of Truth and the Saving of Souls.

W. D. ACKERSON.

Editor Glendale Press: In order that there may be no misunderstanding in the minds of the people of Glendale, we desire to make the following statement:

We are in no way, directly or indirectly, connected with the Oak Forest Land & Water Company. The knowledge that said Oak Forest Land & Water Company is suing the City of Glendale for the purpose of nullifying a certain cemetery ordinance was first obtained by us through reading news items appearing in the Glendale newspapers.

We are directly interested in the lowering of all transportation rates to Glendale and will give any movement of this character our financial and moral support.

No fool is worthy to be a Rotarian. I was talking to one of these fool misogynists the other day. 'There goes young Kail,' I said. 'He's got $40,000 a year and yet he won't have anything to do with women.' 'That,' said the fool misogynist, 'is why he has $40,000 a year.'"
